FEARS ABOUT FOOD SAFETY ON THE RISE

Recent encounters with contamination cause new-found anxiety about system

Excerpted from 2 articles in THE GLOBE and MAIL, Canada, by Murray Campbell, courtesy Dr. Pierre Clautier, 4/13/98: [quoting]

This is what food poisoning looks like behind the headlines.

When Tammy Collins noticed last month that her seven-year-old daughter, Amanda Drury, was ill, she rushed her to a hospital in Barrie, Ont. The little girl was vomiting and had a temperature of nearly 40 (104 F), but doctors, apparently believing that she was suffering from nothing more than the flu, turned her away.

It took four more visits before a frantic Ms. Collins was able to convince the doctors that bloody diarrhea was serious enough to warrant closer observation and that Amanda should be admitted. Five days later, after losing one-10th of her body weight, the little girl was diagnosed as having salmonella poisoning.

There is a certain irony to this because Ms. Collins is a trained cook and has always been scrupulous about how she prepares her food and disinfects her cooking utensils. "I racked my brain, thinking 'Where did I go wrong?'"

Amanda spent eight days in hospital, and although she is now back in her Grade 1 class, she remains pale and tired. Her mother remains livid with doctors who did not recognize food poisoning, and is worried that her daughter has become a picky eater.

But what may be worse than any of this was the discovery that Amanda had become ill not from anything consumed at home but from a packaged lunch snack given to her by her father. Now, no supermarket looks safe to her. "I'll never, ever buy packaged foods again," Ms. Collins vowed.

This attitude reflects a newfound anxiety in Canada about what we put in our mouths. Suddenly, food that used to be taken for granted is slightly suspect.

PEOPLE have always become sick from eating food, of course, but the 20th century's advances in sanitation and refrigeration reduced the threat enormously. Then new microbes began to appear, and the consequences of food-borne illness have intensified again

U.S. officials say that the incidence of disease has doubled during the past two decades, and their Canadian counterparts estimate that food poisoning kills 200 to 500 people in this country every year.

In the past, people who ate food left too long at room temperature experienced stomach cramps or diarrhea within hours. Now, with pathogens such as E. coli 0157, the symptoms may not appear for a week and the illness may be much more serious.

Infection with the listeria bacterium, for example, can cause miscarriage. Campylobacteriosis can result in Guillian-Barré syndrome, which attacks the muscles and can lead to paralysis.

“We face a far more complex food-safety challenge today,” U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said recently. [End quoting]

If you don’t insist on treatment when they try to ignore you, you may become one of the elite’s numbers in their planned depopulation process. Most of these more virulent strains of bacteria, viruses and fungi are created in the labs for just this purpose, so don’t let them shunt you off if you sense that it is serious.

HOMEBUILDING FAST FRAMING

From POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, May 1998: [quoting]

One of the biggest crowd-pleasers at this year’s International Homebuilders Show in Dallas was a prefabricated building system that enables six workers—no matter their skill level—to frame a house in a day. Developed by Kato Sangyo Ltd. of Shimane, Japan, the Metalfit framing system was designed to help meet rising housing demand in a country with a severe shortage of skilled labor. Now Metalfit is coming to the United States.

The system is built around a series of steel connectors that easily link the members of a post-and-beam house frame. But the frame isn’t ordinary lumber. Atomu Yoshimura, Kato Sangyo’s managing director, emphasizes that the steel connectors require a precisely milled frame that won’t warp or twist. For that reason, Metalfit is made entirely of engineered wood—that is, wood from small trees and waste lumber that is compressed and then glued together to form larger, stronger pieces. Wall sheathing consists of engineered panels laminated to rigid-foam insulation. The panels are covered with housewrap.

Kato Sangyo’s manufacturing process is equally as precise as its product. Blueprints are entered in the company’s computer, which in turn commands an automated factory. The factory can cut the frame for a 1,600-square-foot custom-designed house in a day; it can crank out frames for identical tract houses at a rate of one per hour.

The system has certainly caught on in Japan. Yoshimura says that output grew from 200 houses three years ago to 2,000 last year. The company plans to open a U.S. factory soon. Once it does, framing a small house could become a weekend project within reach of nearly anyone. —Charles Wardell [End quoting]

Sounds great, but when the economy goes, soon, where will the market be for them??

A VIEW FROM THE DECKPLATES RUNNING ON EMPTY

Excerpted from MILITARY magazine, May/98: [quoting]

NCCM (SW) C. R. (Corky) Johnson, USN (Ret)

Some politicians finally had a good idea, and carried through on it. Rep. Herbert Bateman (R-VA), member of the House National Security Committee and Chairman of the House Readiness Subcommittee, brought some of his colleagues to San Diego, where they held hearings aboard the carrier USS Constellation (CV-64). The panels testifying under oath were petty officers, NCOs and some field-grade unit commanders. These military professionals brought these politicians up to speed on various issues. Their bottom line, according to Navy Times, is that our military is running almost entirely on adrenaline, long hours, and is close to collapse! Each branch of the service questioned had nearly the same complaints. A lack of spare parts, forcing cannibalization of equipment; a lack of midgrade enlisted folks with experience; too much time away from home, plus they're constantly harped on to "do more with less!"

As a former sea-going Command Master Chief, I can guarantee you this has already seriously affected morale and retention! Even the Congressman stated, "Everywhere we look we see the signs of a military that is fast approaching burnout." Another said he's seeing the same hollowness in the force that he saw in the 1970s, a force that was unable to respond to crises. Is Congress going to do anything about it? I hope so, but we'll just have to stay tuned!. It's a cinch the draft-dodger-in-chief is not too concerned. He has our troops spread all over the world, and is content to just leave them there! [End quoting]

The elite have their plans well laid, and the signs of their implementation are showing up more and more.

NEWS BRIEFS

From MILITARY magazine, MAY 1998: [quoting]

BILL AND SADDAM

Jordan's King Hussein wants to set up direct talks between Clinton and Saddam Hussein.

PEACE PROCESS

It's worse off now than before the latest round with Saddam Hussein. The U.S. suffered a loss of confidence with the Arab world in the on-and-off-again threat of an attack. We expect the Clinton administration will press Israel to make more concessions in an attempt to please the Arabs. Israel will resist and Egypt will move closer to the Iran/Syria camp.

TURKEY'S STABILITY

By banning Islamist political activity in Turkey at the request of pro-West generals, they have set off new waves of protest in the Muslim community at home and abroad. Turkey faces the possibility of a showdown with Greece over Russian missiles to be delivered to Cyprus. Now there is fear that the fighting in Yugoslavia involving Kosovo's ethnic Albanians and the Serbs could spread to Macedonia, which does not want Albanian refugees, and even on to Greece and Turkey.

NAFTA GESTAPO

A big flaw in NAFTA was the creation of the Commission on Economic Cooperation (CEC), a group of international scientists and environmentalists. Just north of the Mexican border in Arizona is the tiny community of Sierra Vista which draws water from the San Pedro River. CEC has decided Sierra Vista takes too much water from the river yet, in an appeal to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the U.S. EPA and in Federal Court, Sierra Vista won their case to water rights. This group of foreigners in CEC, however, demand that limits be placed on Sierra Vista so that a river, originating in the U.S., can provide more water for Mexico. The Clinton administration is ready to allow this foreign tribunal to dictate to our courts.

MACEDONIA

Macedonia, which has a rag-tag 15,000-man Army, is politically unstable. War between Yugoslavia and Albania could spread to Macedonia. Albania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey have long considered Macedonia a part of their territory and any or all may join the fight to lay claim. This scenario was predicted in 1993. Old ethnic and religious ties make it hard for these nations to sit on the sidelines while borders are changed. The region presently involves both UN and NATO operations, which complicates matters. In any event the U.S. will be involved. [End quoting]

CHRISTIANS 1, ACLU 0

From THE JUBILEE, Mar./Apr. 98: [quoting]

The United States Supreme Court tossed out an ACLU lawsuit against a nativity scene displayed by Syracuse, NY during the Christmas season.

This sort of ACLU lawsuit has become commonplace during the Christmas season nationwide. What is not so commonplace is the result. The vote of the justices was 9-0 in favor of the city, against the ACLU. [End quoting]

They threw a crumb to the "Christians"??

ANOTHER HATE-CRIME HOAX

From THE JUBILEE, Mar./Apr. 1998: [quoting]

Students at conservative Duke University woke up on November 12, 1997 to find a Black doll hanging by the neck from a tree on the campus green. Under the hanging doll was a bench smeared with black paint. A sign on the doll read "Duke hasn't changed". Naturally there was an uproar. The cry of "hate crime" appeared in local newspapers. Black Students staged a sit-in at the Dean's office.

After two days, two Black students were caught and confessed to the act. What had been a “hate crime” was suddenly changed into a “political protest” and free speech. [End quoting]

Talk about putting spin on spin!

INDONESIA TORN BY PRICE RIOTING

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/6/98: [quoting]

Flipping over cars and hurling rocks at police, thousands of rioters furious about price hikes rampaged in northern Indonesia on Tuesday in the worst outbreak of violence since the country’s economy buckled last year.

Helmeted police officers fired in the air to ward off mobs of looters who set fire to two homes and 14 cars and pelted hundreds of storefronts with stones, residents said.

Witnesses said several dozen people were injured.

While the government was buoyed by an additional $7 billion from the International Monetary Fund Tuesday’s unrest is a painful reminder that the economic pain is becoming too much for many Indonesians to bear. [End quoting]

A foretaste of what we’ll have here soon??

HIGH-TECH MOUSE CAN’T BE PATENTED, COURT RULES

From THE MONTREAL GAZETTE, by Tom Spears, 4/23/98, courtesy of Dr. Pierre Clautier: [quoting]

You can’t patent a mammal in Canada—for now.

The Federal Court of Canada yesterday turned down Harvard University’s attempt to patent a type of mouse that gets cancer easily.

Harvard genetically engineered the mouse to help in cancer research and already has a patent in the United States. It had asked Canada’s patent office to grant one here.

This would have given Harvard the sole right to create mice with these genes, breed them, own them and decide who may use them in Canada.

When the patent officials refused, Harvard appealed to the Federal Court.

But Judge Marc Nadon says the “oncomouse” (named for oncology, the study of cancer) is not an invention under Canadian law.

DIDN'T INVENT MOUSE

Harvard invented a method of injecting mouse cells with a cancer-prone gene, “but they have not invented the mouse,” he writes.

“A complex life form does not fit within the current parameters of the Patent Act without stretching the meaning of the words to the breaking point, which I am not prepared to do,” he concludes.

But he adds: “If Parliament so wishes, it can clearly alter the legislation so that mammals can be patented.” The ruling leaves patents on some single-celled life forms intact. For instance, patents exist on a yeast culture that can be used to digest and break down liquid waste from a pulp mill.

But genetic engineering is now creating life forms that are different from anything produced by nature alone.

CONCENTRATES CONTROL

For instance, Monsanto, a pesticide company, has developed new varieties of corn, cotton and soybeans engineered to resist a Monsanto pesticide called Roundup.

Monsanto holds patents on “Roundup-Ready” plants in the United States, but not in Canada.

Some environment groups say such patents threaten to concentrate too much control over crops, farm animals and medical research in the hands of a small number of corporations.

Biotech companies say they need the patents to protect their investment in expensive research from their rivals.

The mouse ruling “seems to hold the law on the status quo”, namely that only single-celled life forms can be patented here, said David Morrow, Harvard’s lawyer.

He said he has sent a copy of the judgment to Harvard, but the university hasn’t had time to react.

Harvard designed the oncomouse to be very prone to developing cancer. That means cancer researchers can use it without having to make a healthy rodent sick.

As well, they can avoid the use of strong cancer-causing drugs that may remain in the mouse’s body and skew their results. [End quoting]

Always the excuses and never any thought about ethical behavior. Where are the environmentalists and the animal rights people in these cases. Oh, I forgot, there’s too much money for the corporations—the elite—to pocket.

CONSERVATIVE PURGED

From THE JUBILEE, Mar./Apr. 1998: [quoting]

Mainstream conservative Scott McConnell was fired from his job as the editorial page editor at the New York Post after he wrote an editorial against Puerto Rican statehood. The editorial was moderate in tone but shortly after the paper came out a group of angry Puerto Ricans stoned the offices of the Post screaming racist slurs at the Whites and demanding the paper retract the editorial.

After that incident, the Post's publisher, Martin Singerman informed McConnell that the paper was “pro-immigration” and fired him. Later McConnell said that it had suddenly dawned on him, “that our society had developed an expected script of White Anglo-Saxon contrition and apology...and that I had failed to follow it.” [End quoting]

If it helps to pull down the U.S., they bow.

MICHAEL AND THE SUPREME COURT

Excerpted from THE JUBILEE, Mar./Apr. 1998: [quoting]

March 30, 1998—In a one-sentence message The Supreme Court denied the writ of certiorari filed by Attys. Mike Farris and Herb Titus on behalf of Army Specialist Michael New.

This writ was a request that the higher court order the Federal Court of Appeals to hear the case. The Court of Appeals had denied Michael New a hearing on the merits of the case last November, arguing that they have no jurisdiction.

The next step is the Army Court of Criminal Appeals, meeting in Falls Church, Virginia on 28 May. The Army has already filed its brief, in which they will tell the judges that this case is “nonjusticiable”, in the military courts. (Which means that THEY have no jurisdiction!) This will not be a hearing open to the public.

If the ACCA agrees with the Pentagon, and they are expected to do so, then we will be witness to an American citizen-soldier who has been expatriated, stripped of his legal protection by both civilian and military courts, forced out from under the umbrella of the legal protections provided in the Constitution.

This government is moving perilously close to the position of declaring, in effect, that the Constitution does not apply because it has been rendered irrelevant by treaties, by an activist judiciary, and by a spineless Congress more interested in reelection than in doing what they took an oath to do. [emphasis mine]

Can a government FORCE a citizen, to whom it guarantees “freedom of religion”, to serve in a foreign military capacity under an anti-Christian, unelected, anti-American United Nations military? Can a Christian, or anyone for that matter, be legally required to serve two masters? The implications are staggering.

Yes, you have suspected it all along. The awkwardness of their position is that none of them want to admit it, because it can radically change the way Americans view this “New, Improved State”.

Where does a citizen appeal, when stripped of legal protection by both military and civilian courts? Under what courts can SPC Michael New find justice? The Hague? We don’t think so! Well, there is still Congress, there is still the Court of Public Opinion, and there is still a merciful and just Judge of the Universe, in Whom we believe, in Whom the Founders believed, but in Whom the current rulers do not believe. We are confident in that position. Faith and Obedience to God is the most dangerous thing in the world to Tyrants.

The Sovereignty of all countries is endangered when the USA concedes any degree of its own sovereignty. Daniel New; Michael New Action Fund <ddnew@bigfoot.com>

US Army Spc. Michael New was court-martialed in 1995 for refusing to don U.N. garb in a UN peace-keeping mission. [End quoting]

Another way to test the waters for how far they can go in ignoring the Constitution??

DIGITAL WILL LAY OFF
27% OF ITS WORK FORCE

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/7/98: [quoting]

Compaq Computer Corp. will cut about 15,000 jobs at Digital Equipment Corp., or 27 percent of the work force, as part of its planned $9.55 billion acquisition of the computer maker, people familiar with the plans said.

Compaq will take a restructuring charge of $1.5 billion to $2 billion after completing the purchase, according to filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission. [End quoting]

Some more of the signs of our booming economy?? It seems what is really “booming” is the downsizing of our economy. There is a very true and old saying: If you want the truth, just turn what the politicians and elite are saying 180 degrees and it will be pretty accurate.

AUTOPSY RULES McDOUGAL DEATH AS NATURAL,
DESPITE TOXIC PROZAC LEVEL

Excerpted from THE STAR-TELEGRAM, by Jack Douglas Jr., courtesy of Mauriene Pierce, 4/30/98: [quoting]

An autopsy shows that James B. McDougal, a key witness for Whitewater prosecutors who are investigating President Clinton, had a toxic but nonlethal amount of an antidepressant drug in his body when he died of heart failure last month in a Fort Worth federal prison, according to the Tarrant County medical examiner.

McDougal died a natural and quick death on March 8 in a sudden cardiac failure, unrelated to the high level of Prozac in his body, medical examiner Nizam Peerwani said yesterday.

No other drug was found in McDougal's system, Peerwani said, although the prisoner had been on other medications for a variety of health problems, including a heart ailment and high blood pressure.

At the time of his death, McDougal, a former friend and confidant of Clinton's, was in an isolated jail cell in the Federal Medical Center on the south side of town. He was serving a three-year prison sentence for conspiracy to defraud the government.

Peerwani said his office carefully examined McDougal for any evidence of poison or other trauma, knowing that conspiracy theories would emerge that the high-profile prisoner may have been killed to keep him from testifying against the president.

"We can put that theory to rest," Peerwani said. "We do not think Mr. McDougal was killed. There's no evidence of foul play, there were no poisons."

The normal dosage for patients who receive Prozac for depression is 20 milligrams daily, Peerwani said. But for McDougal, Peerwani said, "someone made the judgment to increase the dosage to 60 milligrams.

"And I think for him, that was too much," he said. [End quoting]

I wrote the details of what led up to this murder (??) in a recent article.

This wouldn't sound like murder at all in a court room of honest jurors—now would it. It seems to be just too many coincidences here and the timing was just perfect for his assisted departure.

CAPITOL CRIMES

ULTIMATE FOB—VERNON JORDAN

From THE JUBILEE, Mar./Apr./98: [quoting]

During the height of the Monica Lewinsky scandal Bill Clinton's closest friend and confidant was Vernon Jordan. Clinton was little more than a paper tiger, while Zionists ran the foreign policy and military establishments, and bureaucrats of the racial, feminist, and homosexual establishments squabbled over the domestic budget. Insiders kept their distance from Clinton for fear of being tainted by the scandal surrounding him, but Jordan was all over him.

Although he is universally supported by the mainstream media which describes him only as a "civil rights activist" few people realize that Jordan was placed into powerful positions with major American corporations and was able to ensure funding for left-wing causes and support for Clinton from America's Fortune 500 companies. Vernon Jordan sits on the board of directors of Xerox, Union Carbide, Bankers Trust, American Express, J.C. Penney, and Sara Lee, RJR Nabisco, and multinational Daimler-Benz. His wife Ann Dibble Jordan sits on the boards of Johnson & Johnson, Travelers Group, and the very powerful

Capital Cities/ABC. [End quoting]

Very interesting revelations are coming out of how the elite cover all bases to get funding—or anything else they desire—but they failed to take GOD seriously when He stated truth would be revealed in these endtimes.

EXTREMIST BACKGROUND

[quoting, same source:]

A political operative hired by Bill Clinton to do opposition research on political opponents has quite a past as a left-wing extremist. Terry Lenzner worked briefly in the Nixon Administration as head of legal services in an anti-poverty program. He was dismissed when it was discovered that he violated Office of Economic Opportunity regulations by giving federal anti-poverty money to radical, violent left-wing groups like the Black Panthers and Students for a Democratic Society. [End quoting]

Crime bosses routinely hire criminals—they can't control honest people.

STRANGE BREW ON JET

From THE MODESTO BEE, 4/26/98: [quoting]

Passengers on an American Airlines flight from Colombia earlier this month almost got a freshly brewed cup of liquid heroin after 15 pounds of the drug was hidden in coffee packaging. The flight crew put a package into the coffee maker but noticed that the resulting brew didn't look right, said airline spokeswoman Martha Pantin. No passengers were given the brew, but it was not clear if any of the crew drank the concoction. [End quoting]

That really came close to “flying high”. It could have been a very tragic incident.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/4/98: [quoting]

STAY HOME

Senior citizens enrolled in HMO medical plans are being unfairly restricted in their travel plans. HMO plans provide that if enrollees move out of their home area, they are dropped from the program. The problem arises in their interpretation of “moving out of the home area”.

If enrollees are away for a consecutive period of 90 days, the HMO considers that to be a move out of their home area.

—John And Helen Porunchak, Stockton, CA.

FORGET IT

How many readers have noticed that Blacks Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition) no longer carries the word “republic” or its definition, but does carry the word “democracy” and its definition? That’s one way to make sure our constitutional republic disappears down the memory hole.

—W.D. Ferguson, Medford, Oregon

CHANGE CALL

In the Revolutionary War, the call was, “To arms, the British are coming.” Now, it’s “The president is coming, hide your women.” A sad commentary on our times.

AGAINST ALL ODDS

From GUIDEPOSTS, Jan. 1998, P.O. Box 1479, Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

When people with serious illness rally and recover unexpectedly most physicians are hesitant to use the word miracle. And yet, “There are always people who do far better than we expect,” says Dr. David Steinberg, chief of hematology at the Lahey Hitchcock Medical Center in Burlington, Mass., and assistant clinical professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School. So every year during the holiday season Dr. Steinberg devotes the hospital’s weekly tumor conference to what he calls the Miracle Conference.

During the rest of the year the cases presented typically involve patients with extremely difficult problems—diseases usually categorized as incurable or terminal. But when the “incurable” are cured, that is a reality too. So the purpose of Dr. Steinberg’s case presentations is to provide a boost for hospital providers whose work in caring for very sick patients can be difficult and depressing. “It is uplifting for them to know that their efforts sometimes result in substantial benefits,” says Dr. Steinberg.

Over the past 12 years a number of patients have attended these gatherings in a boardroom at the Lahey Hitchcock Medical Center. They’ve mingled with the audience—primarily oncologists, surgeons, hematologists, nurses and other staff members who work with cancer patients—and answered questions: “Why do you think you did so well when the medical odds were very much against you?” “What have you learned from being so sick?” In a sense, the responses speak for themselves. Let’s meet a few of these remarkable people.

Fannie Tourinho came to the Lahey Clinic about 22 years ago, when she was 52. She had been in pain for almost a year, but a succession of doctors couldn’t pinpoint the reason. “It’s my back and legs,” she explained. “They hurt all the time.” Overwhelming fatigue kept her in bed for days on end. And when she did get up, frequent falls often resulted in bone fractures.

Somehow, Mrs. Tourinho managed to get to church one Sunday. As she explained, “I got down on my knees and asked the Lord if there was somewhere I could get some help. The next day I got a call from the Lahey Clinic.”

In fact, one of her physicians had called the clinic and asked if they would do a workup on her. A battery of tests left no doubt about the cause of her pain: She was suffering from multiple myeloma, cancer of the bone marrow. Even today, with a host of new drugs and procedures for treatment of this disease, the survival rate is measured in months to a few years. That was the prognosis Dr. Steinberg was forced to pass along to Mrs. Tourinho. Her reaction?

“God will see me through. Last night I read my Bible. In Proverbs it said, ‘Trust in the Lord with all thine heart.... He will direct thy path.’”

Dr. Steinberg knew his patient understood little about the physiological nature of her disease. Her faith, though touching, was hardly grounded in medical reality. But then she added something that startled even him.

“And another verse in my Bible said, ‘It shall be marrow to thy bones.’ So you see, the Lord’s directing this.”

In those years marrow transplants were not yet done for this disease. Nevertheless, the chemotherapy treatments Fannie would be given would indeed be focused on her marrow cells. Even so, Dr. Steinberg gently explained to Fannie that they might be able to give her no more than a year or two of pain-free living. “However long God wills me,” Fannie replied.

Twenty years later when Mrs. Tourinho appeared at the Miracle Conference there were a few in attendance who thought the original diagnosis might have been wrong. But Dr. Steinberg was ready for that. The X rays, pathology slides and lab reports accumulated during her course of treatment—all of them displayed to the audience—left no doubt she suffered from multiple myeloma. “How then did you manage to beat an unbeatable disease?” a resident doctor asked the sparkling 72-year-old woman.

“Through faith and religion,” she said. “Simple as that.”

Dr. Steinberg introduced Fannie to the assembled staff, along with another woman who also had been diagnosed with multiple myeloma more than a decade ago. “When I first saw these women,” Dr. Steinberg told the gathering, “I’d have given you fifty-thousand-to-one odds they wouldn’t live more than a few years. Yet today both live full and normal lives.”

Although they had never met, the two women turned and embraced. Obviously, they had shared an experience few people survive. “But how?” a resident asked.

“Through faith,” they replied almost in unison.

Later, a young doctor took Dr. Steinberg aside and asked how he felt about the women’s response. It was a question Dr. Steinberg had thought about many times before. “As you know,” he said, “we see many extremely religious people here who do not live beyond medical expectations. But no matter what the outcome, I do think faith makes it easier for patients to deal with their treatment and illness. Instead of being sullen or angry, they see it as part of a greater plan.”

Remarkable recoveries, however, don’t always involve malignant disease. Among other miracle cases often mentioned at the Lahey Hitchcock Medical Center is Lori Greatorex. In 1992, at age 22, she suffered a massive stroke on her wedding day. “I’d just changed into my going-away outfit and was saying good-bye to the guests when I blacked out,” she explained.

In the intensive-care unit at Lahey Hitchcock, neurologist Dr. James Russell could offer little hope for Lori’s full recovery. “There were periods when she had almost no speech, very little comprehension, and no movement at all on her right side,” he says. Brain scans showed a blood clot had blocked an artery, causing destruction in the left side of her brain.

“We tried to improve cerebral blood flow and salvage some areas,” Dr. Russell added, “but I’m not sure it made any difference.”

At the New England Rehabilitation Hospital In Woburn, Mass., however, Lori worked relentlessly to regain her speech and comprehension. Doctors and nurses shook their heads in amazement at her progress. Still, they didn’t think she would ever regain movement on the right side. CAT scans and MRIs showed there had been too much damage. But they were in for a surprise.

Each and every day Lori got up early and headed for the exercise room, where she worked for hours, lifting weights and stretching. Faster than anyone dreamed possible, she regained movement in her fingers and toes, then her hands and feet and finally in her legs and arms.

What drove her to work so hard?

“I never thought about the negative,” Lori says. “I kept thinking ‘This is going to get better. This is going to get better.’ In my mind, I was going to be fine. It was just a matter of time.”

How far Lori actually did come back from a major stroke is truly miraculous. Three months after the initial episode she returned to work as a hairdresser; in 1994 she ran the Boston Marathon, finishing in four and a half hours and raising two thousand dollars in pledges for stroke victims; and not long after that she and husband Jim celebrated the birth of their first child, a healthy daughter.

“I can’t Prove Lori’s attitude made a difference,” says Dr. Russell, “but I believe there were intangibles at work that nobody fully understands.”

After recovering from an unbeatable illness, does a patient’s attitude toward life change? The answers are uniformly yes.

“I don’t worry about little things anymore,” announced a middle-aged woman who had recovered from leukemia. “I take each day as it comes and try to get as much out of it as possible.” After a prominent Boston lawyer with a fast-track career was successfully treated at the clinic for a large malignant tumor, he reevaluated the priority he had given to power and success. “Now I realize there are far more important things in life,” he said. Dr. Steinberg’s favorite among the miracle cases, however, is an elderly man I’ll call Salvatore, who seven years ago was diagnosed with extensive large-cell lymphoma. His age and other health problems made long-term survival extremely doubtful.

But Salvatore kept beating the odds. When doctors examined him shortly after his eighty-first birthday there was no sign of a tumor. Yet he still sometimes appeared at the hospital to say hello and ask if he could do any favors for the staff. “Can I wax your car, doc?” he asked Dr. Steinberg.

“But, Sal,” the doctor told him, “you just got over a serious illness. You should be home taking it easy.”

“Don’t worry,” came the reply, “I’ve got faith in the doctors—and faith in God. What more do I need?”

Even medical experts are astounded when “incurable” patients live on. Don’t limit God.

NEWT GINGRICH: CLINTON BLACKMAILED ISRAEL DURING SUMMIT

From the INTERNET, courtesy of Calvin Burgin, <wrldline@texas.net>, 5/8/98: [quoting]

NEWT Gingrich, Speaker of the House of Representatives, has accused President Clinton of blackmailing Israel during the London summit earlier this week.

Republicans and Democrats in Congress are outraged at the apparent ultimatum given to Benjamin Netanyahu, the Israeli Prime Minister, when negotiations foundered last Tuesday.

In an assessment of current American policy, Mr. Gingrich said that, while the Jewish state was celebrating its 50th anniversary, President Clinton's contribution was: "Happy Birthday; let us blackmail you on behalf of Yasser Arafat."

The Middle East talks, due to resume in Washington on Monday, face collapse because Mr. Netanyahu has been invited only on condition that he agrees in advance to hand the Palestinians a further 13.1 per cent of the West Bank, which Israel occupied in 1967. This, he says, is incompatible with Israel's security.

White House and State Department officials do not deny that they are engaged in brinkmanship but insist that they are not trying to impose terms on Israel.

Nevertheless, Mr. Gingrich and others are stunned that Mr. Clinton and Madeleine Albright, the Secretary of State, appear to be siding with the former terrorist leader against Israel. Without referring directly to the storm in Congress, Mr. Clinton denied that he was exerting undue pressure. He said: "I don't believe Israel or any other country should accept the dictates of the United States in the peace process."

"It's not an ultimatum," said a White House official. "In order to head where Mr. Netanyahu wants to go, to accelerate final status talks, there has to be a basic agreement on the American ideas." But if Mr. Netanyahu did not agree, there would be no summit on Monday and Washington would have to "take a new approach".

The Israeli cabinet will decide on Sunday whether to accept the Washington blueprint. Mr. Netanyahu has not ruled it out, but says the gap between his own offer of about 10 per cent and Washington's demand can be bridged only if his security concerns are met.

Mrs. Albright agreed yesterday to send Dennis Ross, America's special envoy, back to Israel to try to resolve differences before the cabinet decision.

One solution being discussed is to recategorize lands so that some notionally under Palestinian authority would still be open to Israeli security forces.

Hillary Clinton threw her own thoughts into the mix yesterday, saying she supported the creation of a Palestinian state. Washington rushed out a statement saying Mrs. Clinton's ideas about final status were her own, not necessarily those of her husband's government. [End quoting]

This is very important in that it tells openly of the battles that are going on between the elite as they divide up the spoils—the world. As Hatonn said—over and over again—the elite will do themselves in.

NEW YORK TIMES FOLLOWS
SPOTLIGHT WITH TRUTH

Conservative/Christian alert: the New York Times says it is now OK to talk about Zionism.

From THE SPOTLIGHT, by Fred Blahut, 5/4/98: [quoting]

For more than 22 years, this populist newspaper has been telling anyone who would listen that: Judaism is a religion, of which there are several divisions: i.e., Orthodox, Conservative and Reform, to name the best known;

* Zionism is a political movement having nothing to do with religion;

* Not all Jews are Semites; and * Jews themselves can't decide who's a Jew.

For this, we have been constantly condemned as “anti-Semitic”. Since the statements above are demonstrably true, then it must be telling the truth that has made us “anti-Semitic”.

But now comes the New York Times (NYT), self-proclaimed “newspaper of record” for the United States (if not the world) and bastion of “pro-Semitism” (as the opposite of anti-Semitism). Noting the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Jewish state in the Mideast, the Times has printed a number of stories and book reviews which say such things as:

* Judaism is a religion and Zionism is a political movement; and

* There is a great racial diversity among those who consider themselves Jews.

Now we're really confused. That sounds like prima facie evidence of anti-Semitism to us. After all, that's what we've been saying for more than 22 years, and, according to “Christian” leaders such as Jerry Falwell, Pat Robertson and Billy Graham, and “conservative” spokesmen such as Cal Thomas and many others, we're “anti-Semitic”.

THEY SAID IT

Serge Schmemmann, in the NYT, points out that a poster on the side of many Jerusalem buses marking the 50th anniversary of the Jewish state “shows three boys over the slogan ‘Together with pride, together in hope’”. Then he goes on to point out that “One boy has the dark skin of an Ethiopian, the second the Slavic features of a Russian [Ashkenazi/Khazar—Ed.] and the third the tawny complexion of a native Israeli [Semitic—Ed.]”.

Says Schmemmann, they represent “a part of the remarkable ethnic and cultural diversity that has evolved...since Israel was founded.

“Yet whether that diversity marks the success or failure of the Zionist experiment is a matter of considerable debate among Israelis...”

Note: it isn't a Jewish experiment; it's a Zionist experiment.

Meanwhile, the Times reports on a 22-part documentary called Tkuma or Rebirth that has been running weekly on Israeli TV.

Says Joel Greenberg in the NYT:

“The widely watched program is an unvarnished historical account that replaces the traditional Zionist story with a variety of narratives, including the voices of Palestinians, Israeli Arabs and Sephardic Jewish immigrants resentful at their treatment by Israel's European-born establishment.”

Greenberg says that, “According to the version of Israeli history taught in schools, the Jews returned to reclaim a mostly empty land but were fought by the Arabs, many of whom fled during Israel's war of independence when their leaders promised that they would soon return when Israel was destroyed.”

Then, he says, “In the television series, the epic of nation-building is accompanied by accounts of expulsion, dispossession and killing of Arabs, and by monologues of Palestinians lamenting the loss of their country.”

Now when The SPOTLIGHT has pointed this out, the charges of “anti-Semitic” have flowed like water from a barren rock struck by a staff at the command of God. This, however, is the New York Times speaking, and the New York Times can't be anti-Semitic, because it is as pro-Semitic as anything in America.

Roger Cohen explains that “Zionism involved the shaping of a secular identity from an old religious identity.” And, Cohen says, Theodor Herzl, the father of Zionism, “with his rational and secular convictions, specifically eschewed recourse to any divine justification for his nationalist movement... In fact, it was precisely Herzl's secularism, his sharp focus on practical measures, that led many rabbis to spurn his movement as an attempt to create, through human organizations, a deliverance that they thought should be divine—a fact that lends some irony to the religious and providential tones of much Israeli nationalism today.”

tians quoting the Bible, scolding us for our “anti-Semitism” and canceling their subscriptions. We wonder if they are calling and writing the New York Times. We wonder if these Christians who like to quote the “cursing” line have even read the NYT or are aware of the television series in Israel. We would be willing to put a small wager in the negative. [End quoting]

What’s happening to the Times?? Do they feel so confident that they don’t care if you know some of the truth??

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN’S BLAST AGAINST JEWS

From a NEWSPAPER CLIPPING, unidentified, article by Benjamin Franklin: [quoting]

“In whatever country Jews have settled in any great number, they have lowered its moral tone; depreciated its commercial integrity; have segregated themselves and have not been assimilated; have sneered at and tried to undermine the Christian religion upon which that nation is founded, by objecting to its restrictions; have built up a state within a state; and when opposed have tried to strangle that country to death financially, as in the case of Spain and Portugal... For over 1,700 years, the Jews have been bewailing their sad fate in that they have been exiled from their homeland, as they call Palestine. But, gentlemen, did the world give it to them in fee simple, they would at once find some reason for not returning. Why? Because they are vampires, and vampires do not live on vampires. They cannot live only among themselves. They must subsist on Christians and other peoples not of their race... If you do not exclude them from these United States, in this Constitution, in less than 200 years they will have swarmed here in such great numbers that they will dominate and devour the land and change our form of government, for which we Americans have shed our blood, given our lives, our substance and jeopardized our liberty... If you do not exclude them, in less than 200 years our descendants will be working in the fields to furnish them substance, while they will be in the counting houses rubbing their hands. I warn you, gentlemen, if you do not exclude Jews for all time, your children will curse you in your graves.” —Benjamin Franklin, 19th century U.S. Statesman, Quoted in the Pinkney Papers.

“Certainly the Jew is the very devil incarnate.” —William Shakespeare, 16th-17th century British dramatist, Merchant of Venice, 2:2 [End quoting]

IN CASE GERM WAR BREAKS OUT SOMEDAY

To the Editor:

Richard Preston (Op-Ed, April 21) properly worries that many doctors would not know how to treat victims of a biological weapon like anthrax or smallpox. This concern was underscored by an April 26 front-page article, “Exercise Finds U.S. Unable to Handle Germ War Threat”.

Contrary to Mr. Preston's suggestion, however, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is not "largely uninvolved" in the "planning loop" to address a bio-attack. In cooperation with other Federal and local agencies, the C.D.C. has sponsored forums, planned coordinated responses and participated in emergency drills in several cities, including New York. —Leonard A. Cole

To the Editor:

Richard Preston (Op-Ed, April 21) recommends that a World Wide Web site be developed to provide medical advice to doctors about potential bio-weapons like anthrax and smallpox. That site is a reality.

In 1996 the Army Office of the Surgeon General opened the Medical Nuclear, Biological and Chemical Defense Training and Education Network at <<http://www.nbc-med.org/>>. The site provides medical information to anyone in the military or civilian health care communities. It includes Army field manuals, information papers, fact sheets, and Government and commercial publications. While it does not yet offer training modules, the goal is to provide an interactive training and reference tool. (Lieut. Gen.) Ronald R. Blanck, U.S. Army Surgeon General, Falls Church, Va., April 22, 1998 [End quoting]

CIGARETTE MAKER LEARNS IT FACES PROBE

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/11/98: [quoting]

Justice Department prosecutors have notified Brown & Williamson Corp. and several of its officials that they are subjects of the government's investigation into cigarette makers and could be prosecuted, law enforcement officials said.

It is not clear whether the company or any of its officials will be indicted. But the development marks the latest step in the government's accelerating inquiry into the tobacco industry.

Prosecutors are looking at issues like whether tobacco makers made false statements to federal officials, manipulated nicotine levels to keep smokers addicted, misrepresented health information and marketed their products to underage smokers.

Justice Department officials declined any comment on the investigation. Mark Smith, a spokesman for Brown & Williamson, which makes Kool, Lucky Strike, Capri and other brands, said he could not confirm whether the company or any of its officials had been alerted by the Justice Department that they were targets of its investigation. A grand jury, sitting in Washington, has been hearing evidence.

Smith said the company was outraged that “any citizen is unfairly threatened by possible criminal charges by purposeful and illegal leaks”.

“We are confident that our employees are honest workers and have committed no wrongful acts,” Smith added. “Brown & Williamson protests this basic unfairness and intends to pursue any remedy available to it.”

Several law enforcement officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Justice Department officials recently had sent letters to the cigarette maker—based in Louisville, Ky., and a subsidiary of BAT Industries PLC—and several of its officials formally notifying them that they face possible prosecution. But in criminal investigations, not all parties who receive such warnings are subsequently indicted.

Information about the Justice Department’s action originally was obtained by the public television news show Frontline, which has produced a documentary about the tobacco industry that will be aired Tuesday. The information was confirmed independently by The New York Times.

The indictment of a tobacco company or any of its officials would mark a major step for the government’s tobacco investigation. Thus far, the inquiry has resulted only in a single plea agreement by a small biotechnology company that worked under contract with Brown & Williamson to develop a genetically-engineered tobacco, code-named Y-1, that had twice the nicotine level of regular leaf tobacco. [End quoting]

It’s about time the prosecutors did some criminal prosecutions of the criminal corporate officers who make the criminal decisions!

CONGRESS TO BE DRUG TESTED

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/11/98: [quoting]

House members and staff will be subject to random drug testing before the 105th Congress finishes up, according to Rep. Joe L. Barton (R-Texas). Testing was authorized in January 1997, but a panel set up to implement it has not decided on appropriate rules. Some congressmen oppose the testing for various reasons. Minority leader Richard Gephardt (D-Mo.) says members are already free to test their own staff. Rep. Ron Paul (R-Texas) opposes testing on constitutional grounds. [End quoting]

It’s always interesting to see the responses of Congress when they are compelled to apply their lawmaking to themselves. The one main difference here is they make laws—supposedly also affecting them—but have enough connections so that they still ignore them without punishment.

I venture to say that many of the congressmen would fail the testing.

MORE FROM MOORE

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/11/98: [quoting]

Michael Moore, self-taught documentary film maker and populist opponent of transnationals has compiled some interesting statistics: Largest employer in the U.S. is Manpower, Inc., a temporary employer. Last year corporate CEO salaries rose 174 Percent. Corporate profits are up 250 Percent from 1991. Employee's salaries are up 2 to 3 percent. Nike's revenues were up 42 percent last year. Michael Jordan is Paid $20 million yearly by Nike, more than the entire 30,000 Indonesian makers of Nike shoes. In the U.S., the richest one percent own 50 percent of all wealth, including both political parties. [End quoting]

This shows what our society thinks of its producers—the hardworking, blue-collar worker.

DRUG WAR PARTNER

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/11/98: [quoting]

President Clinton's pronouncement of Mexico as "a fully cooperating partner in the drug war" is premature. Benjamin Nelson of the General Accounting Office (GAO), quoting a GAO report, said drug-related corruption of Mexican officials remained pervasive and entrenched within the (Mexican) criminal justice system. Nelson reported that U.S. agents operating in Mexico trust only one judge in the entire nation not to disclose wiretapping orders. Since NAFTA, 70 percent of cocaine sold in the U.S. comes through Mexico. [End quoting]

The drug war is doing what it was designed to do: demoralize society and give the drug kings money to protect their monopoly, and let us peons pay the cost.

When will we-the-people ever wake up to the fact that government doesn't protect us from crooks. They protect themselves—the crooks—from us.

CARTOON BOOZERS CAN'T HIDE BEHIND FIRST AMENDMENT

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, by James F. Mosher, 5/11/98: [quoting]

Frogs, cartoon images of dogs, penguins and lizards, Halloween characters such as the Crypt Keeper: these are the child-friendly advertising gimmicks that Anheuser-Busch Co., the world's largest brewer, uses to sell beer.

Anheuser-Busch cartoon characters can be found on radio and television shows seen or heard by millions of teenagers and young children, on billboards near schools and residential areas, at family-oriented community and sporting events and in department stores. Children find these same Budweiser advertising icons on shirts, hats, talking mugs, stuffed animals and other paraphernalia.

August Busch III, chief executive officer of Anheuser-Busch, says his company does not target children and beer advertising does not influence teenagers: R.J. Reynolds said the same thing about Joe Camel.

The tobacco giant was lying. Company officials as early as 1973 recommended "a direct advertising appeal to young smokers" and suggested that "comic-strip type copy might get a much higher readership among young people than any other type of copy”.

Do we have to wait 25 years to find the internal memos at Anheuser-Busch disclosing the obvious—that the Bud frogs and lizards make beer attractive to children?

Underage drinking poses a huge threat to the health and safety of young people. Drunken-driving crashes kill thousands of teenagers each year. Two-thirds of high school seniors say they have been drunk and 30 percent report drinking five or more drinks in a row (binge drinking) at least once in the previous two weeks. Such heavy drinking results in alcohol poisoning deaths, falls, assaults, violence, date rape, poor academic performance and vandalism.

Does advertising contribute to these problems? Absolutely. Recent research confirms what parents know: Alcohol and tobacco advertising exert a powerful influence on children and young teenagers. As with tobacco, beer marketers target teenagers. They know that the earlier you start to drink the more likely you are to become a heavy drinker.

Anheuser-Busch argues it has a free speech right to use kid-oriented advertising. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit disagrees. The court held that alcohol billboards can be restricted to protect the children. The beer industry cannot hide its unethical marketing practices behind a free speech smoke screen. The First Amendment does not apply to beer advertising that targets children.

Anheuser-Busch puts its profits before the health and safety of young people. Its advertising is unfair to parents, who already have a difficult job raising safe, healthy children.

If the industry refuses voluntary reforms, we need vigorous, constitutional restrictions on kid-friendly alcohol advertising similar to those being proposed for tobacco.

August Busch III has a choice: Take the high road and stop marketing to kids, or continue down tobacco road. For our children’s sake, let’s hope he makes the right decision. [End quoting]

If we put a number of these corporate gangsters in prison it might change their attitudes about purposefully corrupting our children.

COUNTERPROTEST FOCUS IS AGAINST FORCED PSYCHIATRIC PROCEDURES

Excerpted from the INTERNET, courtesy of Gail Irwin, 5/98: [quoting]

Hoisting balloons and huge prop hypodermic needles in the air imprinted with the motto of “NO FORCE” counterprotesters vow to break the silence about the spread of forced psychiatric drugging in the USA, especially court-ordered involuntary psychiatric drugging. The location of the Counterprotest has reportedly “enraged” a high-level US government official. That’s because the site of the Counterprotest is in the midst of a big, expensive US government public relations event that is supposed to be celebrating the current mental health system.

The U.S. government, National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, and American Psychiatric Association and other major pro-mental health system groups, are all uniting in a one-mile “Walk the Walk” to promote the current mental health system. The event is mainly paid for by $200,000 in US taxpayer money.

But mental health system “customers” are not showing much gratitude. “Psychiatric survivors” promise to hold their Counterprotest at the same time, same place. [Held May 2, 1998]

Support Coalition International—an alliance of 65 groups in eight countries—is leading this legal counterprotest against forced psychiatry. [End quoting]

Hopefully enough pressure was brought to have a positive effect on this situation.

CHICKEN TROUBLE

Excerpted from the INTERNET, courtesy Gail Irwin, 4/19/98: [quoting]

Jackie has given us some good advice on how to keep chickens healthy. Thanks Jackie, Randy Thought you might want to share some info about the chickens. We give ours food-grade hydrogen peroxide in their drinking water. Raised them from day-olds and have had no problems. I’m sure that isn’t scientific evidence, but I’ve read about the avian flu that killed millions of domesticated birds—of all kinds—including chickens, geese, ducks, etc.

Those that were receiving peroxide bypassed the flu—no problems.

We make a 3% solution from 35% food-grade. (1oz per 11 oz. water). [See box on this page for a good source for food-grade hydrogen peroxide.] [End quoting]

P.S. We had a young Rhode Island Red rooster injure its leg—we know not how. It acted as though it was out of socket. We left it be for a few days to see if it would heal up. The hens started pecking it to death. We rescued him...put him in a house by himself. He wasn’t getting better. Thought we’d have to put him down. Then thought about giving MSM + (that’s MSM with cell salts & ester C). Long story short, the rooster that couldn’t even stand up without falling over on his head, sat around with muscles atrophying, suddenly began to stand—then walk with a funny goose-step walk—and now he’s the most beautiful of the lot. He crows the loudest, can handle 15 hens, no problem, and his feathers are so sleek they look like they’ve been oiled. He runs like a jackrabbit, too. [End quoting]

For those people who have animals, it wouldn’t hurt to keep these natural aids to good health in mind. Don’t forget the human benefits, too.

TB DRUG BACKED

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/6/98: [quoting]

Advisers to the Food and Drug Administration urged approval of the first new tuberculosis drug in 25 years, one that might significantly cut the number of pills patients must take to be cured. They voiced concern Tuesday that patients given rifapentine relapsed twice as often as patients on standard therapy. Still, the easier-to-use drug worked well enough that the panel voted 10-1 to recommend rifapentine. [End quoting]

Seems the doctors only really care about saving half their patients. Some more planned depopulation?? Either way, we pay for our demise.

Saying it is time to end religious coercion in the Jewish state, Tel Aviv's secular mayor announced Monday that he will run against Benjamin Netanyahu for prime minister in 2000. Roni Milo, who will leave Netanyahu's ruling Likud Party to make his bid, said he made his decision after religious interference in a dance performance celebrating Israel's 50th anniversary last week. #### WOMAN'S HOME SITE OF GEYSER ERUPTION

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/12/98: [quoting]

Rotorua, New Zealand—A steaming, spitting geyser erupted on the front lawn of a northern New Zealand woman, terrifying the neighborhood and drawing gawkers from far and wide.

"I'm frightened. I don't know what is going to happen," Karen Herbert, who rents the home, said Monday. "I am looking for somewhere else to live."

The geyser flared to life Friday, hurling rocks—some the size of TV sets—and spewing steam, creating a pool of fizzing water 6 feet across and 10 feet deep. [End quoting]

THE PRESIDENT'S TANGLED WEBB

Excerpted from THE MODESTO BEE, 5/6/98: [quoting]

...Hubbell's attorney, John Nields, says the fact that the tapes were edited makes them suspect, but given the games the Clinton administration has played with information, Nields is creating a smoke screen.

Does the roll over Hubbell thinks he must perform include sending his wife to jail, too? Would both of them pay that high a price to protect Bill and Hillary Clinton? What could they possibly offer him to "roll over again", and probably for a longer stretch as a second offender if he is convicted?

At his news conference last week, the president said the independent counsel's investigation and Republican attacks are driven by people who still can't accept his election or his policies.

He's partially right because the perception of critics is that he won both elections by deceit and by breaking campaign finance laws. An office attained and held illegitimately is illegitimate.

In a laughable response to one question, the president told reporters, "All these people that have been working hard on this for seven years now, they can affect my reputation; they can do nothing for good or ill to affect my character [emphasis mine]."

Webb Hubbell and his nervous friends in the White House might have benefited from Sir Walter Scott's sound advice: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive." [End quoting]

He sounds as though he's happy with his badly flawed character.

DIVERS' CHAMBERS MAY STOP PARALYSES

From THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, courtesy Norman McLaughlin, 5/11/98: [quoting]

High-pressure chambers used to treat divers who rise too fast under water could help prevent paralysis in people with damaged spinal cords, researchers said Sunday.

"It may mean the difference between significant disability and no disability," Dr. Philip James of the University of Dundee in Scotland said in a statement.

James said the high-pressure chambers force healing oxygen into the tissues of a damaged spine. If the blood flow is not restored quickly, cells die, resulting in permanent damage.

A consultant to the North Sea diving industry, James told a conference in Washington that hyperbaric chambers used to treat the "bends" from decompression sickness, in divers would also well serve spinal injury patients.

"Most trauma centers do not have hyperbaric chambers, which is a tragedy, and most physicians don't understand the need to increase the dissolved oxygen in the plasma of the blood," James told the Space and Underwater Research Group of the World Federation of Neurology. [End quoting]

I wonder how long it will take this information to be put to use, knowing how the medical profession resists change—especially if it came from outside their ranks.

SCHOOLS HOPE PARENTS DON'T PUT

OFF GETTING SHOTS FOR KIDS

From THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, courtesy Norman McLaughlin, 5/9/98: [quoting]

Don't procrastinate.

That's the plea Central Florida school and health officials are making to thousands of parents of sixth-graders, who must have required immunizations before classes begin in the fall.

State rules that took effect in 1997 say all seventh-graders must have the first in a series of three hepatitis-B shots, as well as boosters for tetanus, diphtheria, measles, mumps and rubella.

The shots are in addition to the standard series of immunizations required for school admission.

Districts are using a variety of tactics to spread the word. Among them, fliers; mailings, extra clinics, face-to-face prodding and better contact with area doctors and health-care providers.

The collective goal from Volusia to Osceola counties is to stave off the problems that emerged last year, when a few thousand Central Florida students were kept from class on the first day of school because they weren't immunized.

The problems were worst in Orange County, where about 20 percent of seventh-graders were kept from classes.

More than 1,900 of the county's 10,000 seventh-graders had to stay in gymnasiums, auditoriums and separate rooms until parents picked them up.

With those memories still fresh in their minds, officials started notifying parents of incoming seventh-graders several months ago.

In mid-December, Orange County officials set out to have every current sixth-grader fully inoculated by the end of this school year.

Because it takes four to six months to complete the hepatitis-B series, which includes three shots, officials put their plan into action in January.

Since then, school and health officials have gone door to door, mailed information to parents and sent fliers home with students. The health department offers free shots every week. It runs four clinics on the first and third Wednesdays of each month and four others on the second and fourth Wednesdays at some schools.

Despite those efforts the district isn't likely to reach its goal.

So far, an estimated 4,000 of the district's 10,193 sixth-graders—about 39 percent—have been immunized, said Christina Keough, immunization program manager for the health department.

In Lake County, school and health officials Started offering free shots at weekend clinics in February, said Claire Souliere of the Lake County Health Department. Others are planned for this month and in August.

Volusia officials last year managed to thwart the first-day nightmares they watched unfold in neighboring counties.

Fewer than 2 percent of the district's seventh-graders were kept out of class because they lacked immunizations, thanks to extensive planning and warnings to parents for 15 months before school began.

Hoping to repeat that record this fall, district officials have launched another blitz of warnings to get parents' attention. School officials are distributing information in Spanish and English and planning free clinics, as they did last year.

"I don't think we can afford to relax our efforts, because we certainly don't want to be excluding students from school," said Linda Lenk, the district's director of special needs services. "We are mandated by law to turn any student away who isn't meeting the requirements for immunizations. [End quoting]

Notice the forced effort to "help" our children!! Please, begin to realize the politicians aren't out to help anybody except themselves—excepting the very rare ones. When they use this much force to indicate they are "helping" you, there is only one way to view the circumstances and that is to search for how it is truly benefiting them. In this case it looks like it is to benefit the drug and medical industries and the New World Order's plan for depopulation through injected toxic agents.

WAKE UP AMERICA—WE'VE BEEN HAD!!

WILD FIRES IN MEXICO AND GUATEMALA

From THE ART BELL SHOW, 5/13/98: [paraphrasing]

There are a lot of wild fires that are so bad that there is an alert along the Texas and Louisiana border [air pollution??] and smoke moving over into the Caribbean area. Also peculiar the main news media is not covering this story. Why? And what is going on here??

ONLY HUMAN?

From ANGELS ON EARTH, Mar./Apr. 1998, Guideposts, 39 Seminary Hill Rd., Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

The lure of Las Vegas had drawn me with its easy money. For a week I had gambled away funds I didn't even have. Early one morning after losing big at blackjack I discovered I had lost every last cent of the $35,000 my wife and I had saved. How can I explain this to her? I wondered as I left the casino in a daze.

In the predawn hours I stared out the window from my twenty-fourth floor suite. The neon signs glared back at me. I'm done for. My life's not worth living.

I tried to open the window to throw myself out, but it was sealed shut. I picked up a chair to break the glass. As I hoisted it above my head a knock came at the door.

“Room service, sir,” a voice said.

I didn't answer. The knock came again and again. Putting the chair down, I walked to the door and opened it. A young man entered with a flourish, carrying a large silver platter. He had a fair complexion and a shock of blond hair.

“Here you go,” he said cheerfully, putting the breakfast tray down on the table. He noticed my Bible next to it and started flipping eagerly through the pages.

“The Ninety-first Psalm. It's my favorite,” he said. ““The Lord, he is my refuge and my fortress: my God, in him will I trust,”” he read aloud. As I picked up the Bible myself and read the verse again, the young man quietly left. I collapsed on my bed, the desire to kill myself replaced by a deep, gut-wrenching sob.

With God's help I would be able to put my life back together. But for now I gave a prayer of thanks to the Lord. Only he knew I had never ordered room service. —Julius T Stokes, Jr., Alexandria, Louisiana

God sure has unique ways of getting our attention and changing our lives.

CHAPTER 3

RE-ESTABLISH THE CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC OR START ANEW? PART 1 IN A SERIES

by Ray Bilger 5/12/98

Those of us who believe we have any sort of knowledge about what is really going on in the united States of America and what has happened in our past to bring us to this point in time know that things are not what they seem. Indeed, it might be more appropriate to say that we live in a world of opposites, where what is professed to be so is, in most instances, exactly the opposite of what a given situation really is.

President Bill Clinton's almost daily bantering about how healthy and strong the American economy is, is an excellent example in point. Look around you. More factories and businesses close every day (with the big companies moving overseas where labor is cheap), real unemployment keeps rising, less and less of what we buy is made by Americans (with the people now largely employed in service sector jobs, like McDonalds), thus insuring that our money will go out of the country, and it sometimes seems that only the lawyers and bankers are making any money. In addition, the moral decay we are witnessing with, for example, the rot delivered to us on our televisions, only further ensures our demise. America is in a shambles (not to mention the rest of the world).

America today is about as far from the dream envisioned by our nation's original Founders as anyone could possibly imagine. Even though the facade of a Constitutional Republic is touted as still existing, those who are more aware of the facts know it is not so.

We can argue about exactly when the Constitutional Republic met its end, but there can be no argument that it is no longer in operational existence. Oh sure, Congressmen still talk the talk and refer to this or that about the Constitution but, unless they are really stupid, they know inside that it no longer exists.

This is not meant to infer by any means that the Constitution is a perfect document. We stole the basic body of it from the Iroquois Indians and then excluded all Native Americans (and Blacks) from even being considered as full citizens. Article I, Section 2, Clause 3, for example, states in part "...direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states... excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons [Black slaves]." Black people were only considered to be three fifths of a person.

Our Constitution is not perfect but is about the best we have on the planet, a testament to how unevolved we are as a civilization. It could certainly be fixed up, at the very least, to recognize and honor all treaties made with all Indian tribes at all times in our nation's history, with full recognition of their sovereign status as separate, independent, self-governing nations.

At the same time, an extensive apology should be made to all Native Americans with an acknowledgment that it was wrong to ever have assumed that it was anyone's right to come to this land and take it, from sea to shining sea, as though there was no one already here, when in fact it had already been occupied at the time for thousands of years by those who had been placed on the land for “higher” reasons of their growth and expression as Lighted beings.

Nor should there be, in re-establishing the Constitutional Republic, any suggestion whatsoever of overthrowing or attempting to overthrow the current government in Washington, D.C. A very grave mistake in that direction has already been made by ones such as Emilio Ippolito in Tampa, Florida with his “Constitutional Common Law Court” which is backed by its own militia and was threatening to arrest and summarily try judges currently sitting on the bench in the U.S. District Court in Tampa for committing treason against the Constitution. Even though they commit treason, we cannot be foolish enough to take matters into our own hands and pull them out of their courts and try them and hang them. That’s exactly what our “leaders” would like us to do so they have an excuse to take us out. As a result of Mr. Ippolito’s threats, he was put in jail in March of 1996, where he now sits and will probably remain for a long long time to come.

Many people can understand the frustration that drove Mr. Ippolito to feel the pressing need to have a true Article III legal system as our Founders envisioned and set forth in the Constitution. Who can argue with the fact that our legal system no longer serves those it was designed for, We The People? Those judges are supposed to be our public servants, but they now more resemble our masters and treat us as servants!

We might even ask ourselves if it would not be better to simply scrap everything and start all over with even higher ideals and greater vigilance. Then again, could we be sure that those in a new government would be honest individuals, or would politicians once again creep into the picture?

Or should we simply wait and bide our time and let the corrupt cesspool called Washington, D.C. collapse of its own accord as it most surely will, as history has taught us that cultures (and governments, and people) which see no further than themselves, bear the seeds of their own self-destruction. The current government in Washington is a government unto itself (an active functionary of the One World Government/ New World Order). But nothing exists in a vacuum. Indeed, Nature abhors a vacuum. Everything in the universe is in constant interaction with everything else. Our current government long ago ceased to be one of, by, and for the people, and without our active participation it is doomed to fall.

And never underestimate the incredible power of mind control used on the masses in order to achieve the level of corruption we now endure. That mind control is so pervasive it makes the task of re-establishing the Constitutional Republic difficult at best.

If there could be a way for We The People of America to let it be known that we choose to exercise our right to re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and that it is solely our prerogative to do so, then it would only remain for us to so exercise this most basic God-given right in a manner consistent with letting the rest of the world know we no longer recognize the corruption which is Washington, D.C. as “Our” government.

We The People, as the power which created the Constitution and united the States into a nation in the first place, are the only ones who will bring it back into existence, if in fact such is possible or even desirable at this time. We are the Sovereigns in any relationship with “our” government. By law, by the Common Law of our Constitutional Contract (the Constitution), all bureaucrats in government (our agents) must work for We The People, as our servants. That goes for the President right on down through the Congress and the Courts. All public servants are just that, servants, and we their masters.

With yet another July 4th fast approaching, some may think more seriously about the idea of re-establishing the Constitutional Republic. If indeed We The People have been less than vigilant and have allowed the Constitution and the Constitutional Republic to be lost, then it is up to us, and only us, to re-establish it if we so choose.

We have allowed our agents in our federal government, sworn to uphold the Constitution and our rights and interests, to usurp their required obligation and duty, and instead they now serve powerful monied interests which do not have our best interests in mind, but rather our total and complete enslavement.

Since it is strictly within the domain of We The People to regain that which we have allowed to become lost, it would seem only fitting and proper for re-establishing the Constitutional Republic that we should definitely declare in a comprehensive formal statement, the causes which impel us to this most difficult decision, as well as stating our unwavering intent to those whom we have allowed to wrong us. Such a formal announcement to a candid world would have to include some reference to the long train of abuses and usurpations designed to enslave and humiliate the American people. Such a statement might read as follows:

DECLARATION OF INTENT TO RE-ESTABLISH THE REPUBLIC OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

To: All members, agents, servants, operators, operatives and coparties, elected and appointed, in the United States Government, including:

President of the United States
Vice President of the United States
All members of Congress
Attorney General of the United States
Secretary of State of the United States
Secretary of the Treasury
All Supreme Court Justices
Federal Reserve Board
Internal Revenue Service
Central Intelligence Agency
Federal Bureau of Investigation
All agencies, agents, operators or operatives
of the United States Government

BE IT HEREBY KNOWN THAT:

In order to form a more perfect union, We The People of these united States of America, being the Absolute Sovereigns in any arrangement with our government, either State or National (“Sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts”, Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370, 1886 case), and being aware of the fact that our agents in our current “Federal” government may have knowledge of, and/or may be complicit in, actual existing plans to replace our current government and Constitution with a One World Government, through the application of various means, as further described herein, including, but by no means limited to, a collapse of the current unconstitutional usurious money system, the use of human induced earthquakes, hurricanes, tornadoes, and other weather modification techniques, and other mechanisms of Mixed War, designed to terrorize the people and create a chaotic catastrophic situation which would supposedly necessitate the instituting of martial law and other treasonous measures created by Executive Order since 1933, the destruction of our educational system and its replacement with one designed to make perfect, programmed, mind-controlled robots suitable for this One World Government (New World Order), and the use of absolute terror on the American people, such as by orchestrating events like the Waco Massacre and the Oklahoma City Bombing, and through mind-controlling persons to shoot other innocent persons in public settings, do hereby and herein clearly Declare our definite Intent to re-establish The Republic of the united States of America:

(1) In 1975, U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell, Democrat from Rhode Island, spoke out about the use of weather control: [quoting]

The U.S. and other world powers should sign a treaty to outlaw the tampering with weather as an instrument of war.

I’m convinced that the U.S. did in fact use rainmaking techniques as a weapon of war in Southeast Asia. I’m convinced we did because the Pentagon Papers contained a recommendation that an existing weather modification program be enlarged, and the Defense Department, despite repeated opportunities, has yet to issue a comprehensive denial of such activities.

We need a treaty now... before the military leaders of the world start directing storms, manipulating climates and inducing earthquakes against their enemies. [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America know that the technology is now in place, and fully operational, to induce any of the above, including hurricanes and tornadoes, against any designated population, including against We The People of the united States of America, and that even our “Federal” government is involved in these activities, as through Mixed War.

“A Mixed War is one which is made on one side by public authority, and on the other by mere private persons.” People v. McLeod, 1 Hill(N.Y.) 377, 415. It is not even necessary that the people fight back, or even know that their government is fighting to kill and terrorize them, in order to have Mixed War waged against them by their own government.

We The People find these activities to be totally and completely unacceptable and that any and all who are involved in any way with such activities are committing Treason against the Constitution and against We The People of the united States of America and such persons must and will be dealt with accordingly.

(2) On October 27, 1978, the United Nations issued a Report by the Convention on the Prohibition of Military or any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques, Approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations on December 10, 1976.

Article II of the Report states: [quoting]

As used in Article I, the term “environmental modification techniques” refers to any technique for changing—through deliberate manipulation of natural processes—the dynamics, composition or structure of the earth, including its biota, lithosphere, hydrosphere and atmosphere, or of outer space.” [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America clearly understand that the United Nations would not have issued such a Report if there were not intentions to conduct, and the actual conducting of, weather wars and the use of human induced earthquakes, etc., by nations against designated target populations, including against their own Citizens.

We The People of these united States of America find such actions by any government, especially by our own deplorable and totally and completely unacceptable.

(3) On August 11, 1987, a Patent was issued, Patent Number 4,686,605, to Bernard J. Eastlund of Spring, Texas, for a “Method and Apparatus for Altering a Region of the Earth’s Atmosphere, Ionosphere, and/or Magnetosphere”. These Patent Papers state in part: [quoting]

The electron temperature of the ionosphere has been raised by hundreds of degrees in these experiments, and electrons with several electron volts of energy have been produced... This invention has a phenomenal variety of possible ramifications... including missile or aircraft destruction...

Weather modification is possible by, for example, altering upper atmosphere wind patterns or altering solar absorption patterns... and the Earth’s natural magnetic field could be significantly altered... [End quoting]

Mr. Eastlund also explains that Alaska, due to its location relative to magnetic field lines especially suited to the application of this invention, and due to the abundance of fuel supplies necessary for the large power requirements of the invention, would be an ideal location to set up the apparatus. Mr. Eastlund’s work became part of H.A.A.R.P. (the High-frequency Active Auroral Research Project), which, among other things, can produce electronic failures, major power failures, and confusion in the minds of human beings on a grand scale.

We The People of the united States of America know that the large number of aircraft falling from the sky are not doing so by accident, but rather are being made to fall by various means, including H.A.A.R.P., and that this deadly device can cause us all to go crazy, unless we put a stop to the madness now. H.A.A.R.P. must be halted NOW and those involved with its use must be held accountable for their actions.

(4) In 1968, Dr. Gordon J.F. MacDonald, Science Advisor to President Johnson, published his book, Unless Peace Comes—A Scientific Forecast of New Weapons, which describes how man-made changes in the electrical Earth-ionosphere can be used for mass behavior control: [quoting]

E.L.F. (Extreme Low Frequency) electromagnetic oscillations can attack the low frequency electromagnetic brain waves in human beings, producing changes in behavioral patterns. [End quoting]

We The People of these united States of America know that E.L.F., V.L.F. (Very Low Frequency), and L.F. (Low Frequency) electromagnetic oscillations can be, have been, and are being used by governments, including our own, against large populations, including our own, to effect behavioral modifications. This sort of activity is totally and completely unacceptable and constitutes committing Treason and must and will be dealt with accordingly.

(5) In 1970, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Founding Director of the Trilateral Commission and National Security Director for President Carter, published his book, Between Two Ages, which describes: [quoting]

Weather control as a new weapon that is a key element of strategy, and also discusses technology... and a variety of techniques for conducting secret warfare... that would seriously impair the brain performance of a very large population in selected regions, over an extended period.

Only a bare minimum of the security forces need be apprised of these activities. [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America fully understand the fact that Mr. Brzezinski speaks of the very definition of a conspiracy. We further understand that there are only two groups of people who would deny this conspiracy; 1) Those who are unaware of any of the above, and having no basis for comprehending any of this, deny it as outrageous and impossible; and, 2) Those who are aware of the above, but being complicit in such activities, have obvious reasons to vehemently deny their active participation.

Mr. Brzezinski's words are tantamount to yelling "Fire" in a crowded theater and, as such, are not protected by the free-speech provisions of the First Amendment, and he has committed Treason against the Constitution and against the people and he must be charged and tried accordingly.

(6) The January 1978 edition of Specula magazine described an incredibly profound and powerful phenomenon that could be produced within the Earth by what is called the "Tesla Effect", originally discovered by Nikola Tesla. Electromagnetic signals of certain frequencies can be transmitted through the Earth to form standing waves in the Earth itself. Coherence to this standing wave can be induced wherein a fraction of the vast, surging electromagnetic current of the Earth itself feeds into and augments the induced standing wave, so that much more energy is now present in the standing wave than the amount fed in from the Earth's surface. These giant standing waves can then be combined to produce a focused beam of very great energy which can then be used to produce earthquakes at a distant aiming point.

We The People of the united States of America find this type of activity to be very counterproductive to the forward movement of the human race. Any and all Americans involved in any way whatsoever with these activities must be charged with committing Treason and be dealt with accordingly.

(7) On September 10, 1994 the Associated Press (A.P.) reported that the Space Shuttle Discovery utilized a powerful green laser directed at key sections of North America and other parts of the globe. The September 26-October 2, 1994 issue of Defense News stated: [quoting]

During a checkout of the laser machine, pulses began emanating from Discovery at a rate of 10-cycles-per-second as the Shuttle flew over Manitoba, Canada. The lasers continued firing as Discovery cut across Wisconsin, Michigan, and the Northeast, heading out over the Atlantic Ocean near Maryland... [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America were told that this laser was for mapping purposes, but the use of the 10-cycles-per-second (the same frequency as human brain waves) laser employed in the operation reveals that mapping played NO part in the mission, and that we have been lied to about the entire purpose of the Space Shuttle program.

We find it an incredible insult to anyone with any intelligence to believe that the Shuttles are being used for studying such things as rats and fish, and that such fabricated stories are nothing less than outright lies.

Officials at N.A.S.A. involved in these lies, and the real missions, must be held accountable for committing Treason.

(8) We The People of the united States of America recognize the fact that from the time of the first European settlers on this continent forward, there has been a total and complete disregard for the original inhabitants of this land, namely the Native Americans (Indians). Their land was virtually stolen from them largely through the use of treaties which were never intended to be honored by the White Man who created them.

We The People now recognize the absolute necessity to honor in full all treaties made with all Native Americans at all times throughout our history, and to honor those treaties in full as soon as possible. We further extend our deepest regrets for what the ignorant White Man did to the Native American peoples and pledge ourselves to help in any way we can to make Native Americans' future something their children will be happy to be part of.

(9) Our Constitution is a Contract which absolutely binds any and all who would work for We The People (Our Agents) in Our government to specific performance as clearly defined and set forth in Our Contract. Certain powers have been delegated by We The People (the Principals) to Our Agents, with NO written authorization by the Principals for Our Agents to delegate those powers to any other(s).

The Congress (Our Agents) committed Treason to the Constitution and usurped any and all delegated authority they might have had in 1913, as follows:

(A) Our Constitution, at Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 5, states that "Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof..."

(B) 16 Corpus Juris Secundum, Sec. 141, states that Congress cannot delegate or sign over its authority to any individual, corporation or foreign nation.

(C) On December 23, 1913, Congress passed the Federal Reserve Act which delegated the power to regulate the value of money to the Federal Reserve Board.

(D) On April 19, 1982, in the case of Lewis v U.S., 680 F.2d 1239, 1241, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that “The Federal Reserve Banks are independent, privately owned and locally controlled corporations.”

(E) The Class “A” stockholders of the Federal Reserve include, among others:

- (1) Rothschilds of London and Berlin
- (2) Lazard Brothers of Paris, France
- (3) Israel Moses Seaf of Italy
- (4) Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of Germany and New York
- (5) Warburg & Co. of Hamburg, Germany

Thus, the Congress, in 1913, usurped any authority they might have had under the Constitution by delegating a delegated authority to a private corporation. The term “Federal Reserve” is simply a name and is no more “Federal” than Federal Express Co.

Due to the fact that it is the Federal Reserve (owned by international bankers) and their usury debt currency system of fractional reserve banking (the largest confidence game in the world) which has brought America to bankruptcy and made us the largest debtor nation, the actions of Congress in 1913 also constituted nothing less than giving aid and comfort to our enemies, which is the definition of Treason in the Constitution, at Art. III, Sec. 3, Cl. 1.

There is an overwhelming volume of stare decisis (cases which have created a settled precedent) which clearly shows that usury breeds criminality on both sides of such transactions. The Congressional Banking Committees and the Federal Reserve are a prime example of the truth of that.

The Federal Reserve Act, at Section 31, expressly reserves to Congress the right to repeal the Act. The Congress today, if duly informed that Treason has been committed, and if they do nothing about it, can be charged with Misprision of Treason under Title 18 U.S.C. Sec. 2382.

We The People find that Congress does know that Treason has been committed, more times than they can probably count, and that there is no excuse for their having not acted to remedy the situation, and that, therefore, Members of Congress must step aside and relinquish their positions.

(10) Congressman Charles Lindbergh, Sr., speaking out against the passage of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, said the following: [quoting]

This Act establishes the most gigantic Trust on Earth... When the President signs this Act, the invisible government by the money power, proven to exist by the Money Trust Investigation, will be legalized.. The new law will create inflation whenever the Trusts want inflation... From now on depression will be scientifically created. [End quoting]

We The People know that Congressman Lindbergh’s words were absolutely true, and that the Stock Market crash of 1929 and the ensuing economic depression were in fact scientifically created. We also know that the current economic situation we are now in has been scientifically created to collapse in the near future, and we do not find it acceptable and hold all those complicit in these matters responsible and accountable for their actions.

(11) Rep. Louis T. McFadden (R. Pennsylvania) spoke at length before the House of Reps. on June 10, 1932, bringing to light the international superstate (or One World Government) to which the United States of America had become adhered through the Federal Reserve Act: [quoting]

Mr. Chairman, when the Federal Reserve Act was passed the people of the United States did not perceive that a world system was being set up here... They did not perceive that the United States... was to supply financial power to an international superstate—a superstate controlled by international bankers and international industrialists acting together to enslave the world for their own pleasure. [End quoting]

We The People of the United States of America are aware of the fact that Mr. McFadden was absolutely correct in pointing out what we were not supposed to know anything about. We understand that the front organization for this corrupt world enslavement became the United Nations. Mr. McFadden continued: [quoting]

What is needed here is a return to the Constitution of the United States... The independent United States Treasury should be reestablished and the government should keep its own money under lock and key in the building the people provided for that purpose... The Federal Reserve Act should be repealed... Unless this is done by us, I predict that the American people, outraged, robbed, pillaged, insulted, and betrayed as they are in their own land, will rise in their wrath and send a President here who will sweep the money changers out of the temple. [End quoting]

We The People are about to do exactly that as we re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and those who have violated their oath to uphold and defend our Constitution will be held accountable for their actions at the Common Law.

(12) Rep. John R. Rarick, speaking before the House of Reps. On April 19, 1971, alluded to the United Nations being the instrument of a One World Government: [quoting]

The ratification of the U.N. Charter, a plan for world government, by the U.S. Senate in 1945, transferred ‘people power’ still further away from the people at the local level. [End quoting]

We The People of the United States of America find our nation’s participation in the U.N. completely unacceptable, as our National Sovereignty is not to be infringed in any way whatsoever by any of our Agents in our Government.

(13) The case of Sei Fujii v. State, 217 P.2d 481, 486, decided on April 24, 1950 by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, stated that: [quoting]

The [United Nations] Charter has become ‘the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding’. [End quoting]

We The People understand the fact that the Sei Fujii court, in quoting from the Constitution, Art. VI, Sec. 2, deleted the most important part of that Section, namely:

“This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.” (Emphasis added)

A treaty, such as the U.N. Charter, which destroys the Constitution, was never intended by the Framers to be ratified and is most definitely NOT made in pursuance of the Constitution. This being so, the U.S. Senate was without power or authority to ratify the U.N. Charter, and, therefore, We The People hereby absolve the united States of America of any association with the United Nations whatsoever.

(14) On March 9, 1933, the Congress passed an Act which declared that a serious national emergency exists, and the Act also amended Section 5(b) of the “Trading With the Enemy Act” of October 6, 1917 to now include “any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof”. We The People were no longer differentiated from any other enemy of the United States during time of war or national emergency.

In addition to the above, the united States of America has been in a continuous state of declared national emergency since March 9, 1933. This is confirmed in the Foreword and the Introduction to Senate Report 93-549 (1973). This continuous national emergency has suspended our Constitution and our Constitutional Republic as well. We The People find this situation totally and completely unacceptable and those responsible will be brought to justice.

(15) The continuous state of declared national emergency has brought into force Executive Orders (EOs), issued by the President, allegedly to control domestic unrest in a chaotic situation. Some of the more disturbing EOs ready to be implemented at a moment’s notice are:

EO 10995—Provides for the takeover of all communications media.

EO 10997—Provides for the takeover of all electric power, petroleum, gas, and other fuels and minerals.

EO 10998—Provides for taking over all food resources and the nation’s farms.

EO 10999—Provides for taking over all modes of transportation, control of highways, seaports, etc.

EO 11000—Provides for mobilization of all civilians into work brigades under government supervision.

EO 11001—Provides for government takeover of all health, education and welfare functions.

EO 11002—Designates the Postmaster General to operate a national registration of all persons living in America.

EO 11003—Provides for taking over of all airports and aircraft.

EO 11004—Provides for the Housing and Finance Authority to relocate communities into designated areas.

EO 11005—Provides for the government to takeover railroads, inland waterways and public storage facilities.

EO 11490—Implements all of the above in a state of National Emergency.

EO 12148—Provides for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (F.E.M.A.) to coordinate emergency planning.

EO 12803—Provides for privatization of nation’s infrastructure through sale of public assets to private parties.

EO 12919—Brings everything not covered above under total government control.

These EOs are already in place and circumvent, undermine and otherwise destroy all of the cherished rights secured to us by Our Constitution. But We The People do not find this acceptable, and in re-establishing the Constitutional Republic we will reinstitute the rule of the Common Law and those responsible for perpetrating this dictatorial enslavement upon us will be held accountable, since it is quite obvious that our Agents (public servants) have totally usurped any power or authority they may have once enjoyed.

(16) On March 10, 1819, the Virginia Legislature passed Act No. 280 (Virginia Archives of Richmond, “misc.” file, page 299 for micro-film), which made Virginia the 13th and final State to ratify and therefore enact into Full Force the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the united States, which Amendment reads: [quoting]

If any Citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any Title of Nobility or Honour, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a Citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them. [End quoting]

The actual date of ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment was the date of re-publication of the Virginia Civil Code, March 12, 1819. Virginia announced the ratification by publication and dissemination of the Thirteenth Amendment.

As of August 1991, researchers have identified eleven different States or territories that printed the Amendment in twenty separate publications over forty-five years. The Amendment appears to have been removed from Our Constitution during the tumult of the Civil War and replaced, on December 6, 1865, by the current so-called Thirteenth Amendment prohibiting slavery.

As there has never been any kind of formal repealing of the original Thirteenth Amendment, We The People recognize that it is still in Full Force and Effect, and as such, any and all judges and attorneys who now hold a Title of Nobility, i.e. Esquire, cease, at this very moment, to be Citizens of the united States of America, and are incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them.

In addition, people such as George Bush, who, in 1997, was knighted by the Queen of England as Sir George Bush, also cease to be citizens of the united States of America.

(17) Our Declaration of Independence, one of our Founding Organic Documents, signed by our progenitors on July 4, 1776, states in pertinent part: [quoting]

...Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness... (W)hen a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute

Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. [End quoting]

We The People recognize the fact that it is we who have established the united States of America, and it is we who now possess the sole Sovereign Authority to alter or to abolish Our government at any time we so choose. We would not be inclined to abolish Our government for any light or transient causes, but the usurpations and abuses by Our public servants outlined herein constitute only a very small part of a long, long train of abuses we have been forced to endure.

The prescription for correcting the abuses and usurpations by Our Agents in our government is provided in this part of Our Declaration of Independence, and we hereby exercise that right which is Ours and Ours alone.

(18) Black's Law Dictionary, 4th Revised Edition (1968), at page 1444, defines the term "re-establish", as:

"To restore to its former position." Baron v. Prudence Life Ins. Co., 315 Ill.App. 129, 42 N.E.2d 137, 138.

Due to the fact that the Constitutional Republic no longer exists, as set forth above, and due to the fact that Our Agents/public servants have committed and are committing Treason, and due to the fact that "Sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts", and due to the fact that We The People have had more than we should be expected to endure of unconstitutional usurpations by Our Agents, therefore, it only remains for We The People of the united States of America to act to re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and we do now hereby and herein Declare our definite Intent to do so, not out of necessity, but out of common courtesy, For All The World To See.

Nowhere in any of the aforestated Sections of this Document do We The People find any semblance remaining of the once Great Constitutional Republic our forebears fought so hard to establish and gave their very lives to defend. There being no formal public announcement of the dissolution of the Constitutional Republic, even though We The People are aware of the fact that it has been all but done away with, the bare threads of it that remain, in the form of Our Constitution (a Contract), Our Declaration of Independence, and the Articles of Confederation, must now be rewoven into the fabric of the True Constitutional Republic envisioned by Our nation's Founders.

It is for this reason and with this Intention, with a firm reliance on Our Creator, the Source of All Things, that We The People of these united States of America do now hereby and herein Declare Our definite Intent to re-establish the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America, and that we do so now, acting from this moment forward as if and as though there were no constitutionally established government in Washington, D.C., BECAUSE THERE IS NONE.

Having now Declared Our Intent, and the reasons which impel us to this most difficult of decisions, it now only remains for We The People to decide where we shall re-establish the Seat of the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America Government. When is not a question herein.

When it is Re-established is the moment this Declaration is penned and signed by the Representatives of re-establishment Conventions of each of the fifty states of the union, just as our original Declaration of Independence was signed by Revolutionary Conventions of the thirteen original states. These representatives could be descendants of our nation's founders, but if they be but concerned citizens who are mindful of all of the above, they are Absolute Sovereigns, Masters over our public servants in our government and fully capable of insisting upon our right to have the government We The People choose.

For, as the Federalist Papers (the undisputed authority on our Constitution) #51 so aptly puts it: "Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been, and ever will be pursued, until it be obtained, or until Liberty be lost in the pursuit." Liberty shall not be lost for We The People shall now restore it.

We The People will henceforth be ever vigilant and watchful as we re-establish the Constitutional Republic, so that never again shall we allow bankers, or those who possess any Title of Nobility, to unduly influence, participate or disrupt in any way Our Great Experiment in Human Freedom.

By the Power vested in We The People of the united States of America by Our Creator, WE DO NOW HEREBY re-establish the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America, with the Rule of the Common Law in Full Force and Effect.

DONE in Convention by the unanimous consent of the True Representatives of We The People of the Fifty States of the Union, this fourth day of July in the year one thousand nine hundred and ninety-eight, and of the Independence of the united States of America the two hundred twenty-second. In witness whereof we here unto subscribe our names.

California Republic

Raymond E. Bilger, S.J.

It is good to set before humanity an outline of high ideals for developing a just society and then see how society is able to live up to those precepts and guidelines. Such was the purpose of our original Constitution. It was, perhaps, flawed from the beginning and doomed to circumvention by attorneys and bankers who are crooked by definition.

The result has been that our Constitution is merely used as window dressing and in no wise can be followed by our so-called "leaders" and still expect them to maintain the level of corruption they now so deviously enjoy.

So, perhaps it is time to consider the possibilities of starting anew and setting a firm foundation for a just government upon ideals which, once again, may be a bit beyond what we are immediately capable of living up to, but which will give us something with real Truth, Justice, Freedom and Happiness to aspire toward. Such a new foundation must recognize the fact that we are all part of a global community which does not exist in a vacuum, but which is part of a vast universe of inhabited worlds without end.

In Part II we will examine the possibility of starting anew by building a global community without the loopholes which would otherwise allow it to be turned into a political tool.

CHAPTER 4

LANTO: DARE TO SET ASIDE THOSE LIMITING BELIEFS

5/16/98 LANTO, THE SAGE

Good evening, my friend. It is I, Lanto, the Sage. Be at peace, for there was a brief time where we had to decide amongst ourselves who would write at this sitting. There were many considerations of equal importance, and therefore the “moment” of confusion on your part. Let us continue please.

Yes, I, Lanto, come in the Light of the One Light Source—Aton! I come as Master Teacher representing the yellow refraction of His infinite spectral expression. The colors and names are for you in the physical so that you may have a means of association with us. From our point of view, we are much more than what a name or a frequency (color) of light can identify.

Precious ones, we of the Lighted realms of creation are ever grateful for the opportunity to assist Lighted ones in their times of need. In doing so, we are challenged to find creative solutions and suggestions to whatever the unique situation may be for which we have been called upon to respond. As we have often reminded you ones, ALL grow whenever any one grows.

We are beginning to reap the rewards of the seeds planted in prior writings of this nature. More and more of you are awakening your inner perception and awareness, and are consciously connecting with we of the Higher (frequency and energy) realms.

We are grateful to those of you who have accepted this responsibility and who diligently persist in the face of doubt and distraction. This can be a most challenging experience.

When you are on a deliberate path of liberating yourself from self-imposed limitations, there will almost always be deliberate adversarial attack upon yourself or upon those with whom you come into contact on a regular basis—such as family members, friends, and co-workers. The challenge is to grow to the point of being able to recognize these adversarial distractions for what they are. Once you can recognize them, you can overcome them—and not simply react to them. It is the reacting which “feeds the fire” and only causes further distraction.

Never underestimate YOUR importance or the importance of the work that you either are doing or will do! You each have a unique, God-given gift to share with the world, and the only thing that truly prevents you from realizing and actualizing this gift is your own inner denial of self.

Many of you have, usually through so-called “religious” indoctrination, accepted the belief that you are not worthy of God’s direct attention or time. If this were true, then He would not have created YOU in the first place! You ARE worthy! As far as “time” is concerned, God exists outside the limitations of “time”. He can easily “make” time for anyone or everyone as He so chooses.

You are each on a path of remembrance and return to Source. The journey is an adventure in learning—and thus growth toward understanding the true nature of the God-force within EACH of you. None is greater or lesser than another. KNOW THIS TO BE TRUE!

Some have simply put greater effort into facing their self-limiting beliefs and realized that those beliefs have no foundation in truth. They have managed to set those limiting beliefs aside until such time as they have grown sufficiently in understanding that they can realize how it is that they could have held such limitations as truth in the first place. This is to say that, if one so chooses, one can set aside a belief system, and thus explore from a different point of view or set of assumptions.

Sometimes it has been found that, by setting aside “temporarily” some fears and limiting beliefs, one can “test” a new “reality” with greater freedom than if the person were to try to conquer all of the current beliefs and thoughts associated with each view of reality.

Let me use my scribe as an example: He at one time had great difficulties in accepting reincarnation as a truth due to a fundamentalist “Christian” upbringing and subsequent negative beliefs on the subject. He was being guided (though he did not realize it at the time) to read a book written about Edgar Cayce. This book began to describe past lives and how they were influencing the present incarnation of people. My scribe had then a strong, negative emotional reaction and put the book down, for he thought that he was somehow reading “evil” or “satanic” material.

We then worked with him, because he was truly seeking to understand his place in the world, and thus we were able to establish an inner connection. Thoughts began to challenge his thinking like: “How do I know that this information is wrong?” and “Is it my belief or that of my mother?” and “Have I ever encountered any such information for myself?”

This went on for some time as a great inner battle raged between his Higher Knowing self and his ego reactionary self. Finally this one decided that he would put aside his past beliefs “just” until he finished reading the book, so that he could make a more informed decision regarding the subject of reincarnation. This represented a “safe” solution which kept his ego self constrained long enough for the information to be brought forth.

This one book, read WITHOUT prejudice, completely answered the major questions which my scribe was puzzling over at that time. The adversary tried desperately to stop him, but he, with our help, was able to come to a “reasonable” solution and thus find the answers that he was looking for. He never went back to the “old” beliefs because the truth made SO MUCH more sense to him.

Many times, when we help you ones to find the answers you are looking for, we find you are so close to them that it nearly pains us to see you “miss” them—and this thus becomes our challenge. We will always persist as long as the one seeking does not give-up the search.

Learn to recognize this sort of inner battle when it happens. Learn to step outside of the reac- tionary feelings long enough to evaluate any “real” danger. Ask yourself: “Is there any real danger in educating myself in an area that I have not yet investigated?”

For example, is there any real danger in postulating the following: “Let’s assume, for just one week, that I am a worthy creation of God’s desire, and it is MY right to communicate directly with Him, and He will respond to my heartfelt questions. All I need to do is to be willing to receive and recognize His communication without prejudice or doubt.” You may be amazed at what takes place in the upcoming week, if you honestly set aside your prejudices and doubts!

Many of you have traversed this challenge with mixed results. You have been trained to believe that only the most “holy” can achieve this communication.

NO!

Many of our best scribes have had quite diverse experiences that they would perhaps be ashamed to admit in public. Neither we of the Hosts nor God are interested in who you were, but rather are quite interested in who you ARE now and where you are heading tomorrow.

Allow for the adversarial intrusions. Again: he will try to thwart your efforts any way that he can when you are on the path to self-liberation and self-actualization of your unique, God-given potential. Though most of you see it not, the adversary KNOWS what difference one person can make, especially when he or she is connecting within to the infinite potential of the God Source.

Your experiences may get quite “bumpy” before all settles down into a state of “normalcy”. Your personal life may be turned upside-down and inside-out. This testing is allowed; you will need these experiences to challenge you to remain centered and thus trust the validity and strength of your inner connection. Remember that this is schoolroom Earth and you are all there exactly for these challenges, for the growth-through-strengthening that they offer.

Miracles DO happen when you have the determination to persist through any challenge with which you are faced. The journey may take many a lifetime, but you start by taking the first step.

After the first day comes the next day; after the first week comes the next week. Soon you will have years to look back upon, filled with many miraculous “coincidences” and “chance” happenings to remember and draw upon. It is then that you will truly realize that we of the Hosts, and your personal Guides, are watching out for you and helping you whenever we are allowed—and that we always have been doing so.

YOU hold the key to your own salvation. “Christ” (Esu “Jesus” Immanuel) did not die for your sins; he lived so that you would have an example of the true nature of your being! What he taught you, in terms of the Inner Potential of your being, should stand as a testimonial to all of you about where you each are heading. As he did, so too shall you each do! The length of “time” it takes depends upon you and the path you choose to take. I can say that, if you remain in denial and fear, you will be longer in your “wanderings” from lifetime to lifetime.

For those of you who are already experiencing for yourselves the value of this sort of Direct Connection, I ask that you be persistent in strengthening your connection. There are no absolutes in terms of your ability to connect or the strength of the connection. Even the most experienced receivers would be wise to constantly effort towards strengthening their own inner connection. This will, if nothing else, get you out of a condition of boredom or a sense of stagnation!

I am Lanto, come in service to OUR Creator, so that you each may have the confirmations and guidance for which you are asking. Know that you are indeed on the path toward personal growth and inner reward. Let not outer distractions dissuade you from your path.

In Light, blessings to you all! Salu.

MEXICO'S BURNING DUE TO CHASE MANHATTAN BANK ORDERS TO "ELIMINATE ZAPATISTAS"

Just about everybody who makes even half an attempt to follow the news has been more than a little curious about the fires ravaging southern Mexico. Some kind of "blanket of silence" prevailed for many days. Then, when the regular, controlled media finally did "discover" the story, it got played-down as insignificant—while half of the southern United States chokes in thick smoke and haze. Do you smell manipulation by the dark elite yet?

Then we find out a little more about the fires: that they're burning underground (400 degrees F, just 4" below the surface) as well as above-ground, and that they're marching along a most curious straight-line path. Hmmm. Do you smell an engineered event by the dark elite yet?

What horrible, and yet curious, fire conditions are plaguing Mexico! Natural events? Do you longtime CONTACT readers for one moment think so? Remember also the escalating volcanic and UFO activity there.

Elsewhere in this week's CONTACT (pages 23-24) we present some of the more usual news material that has been making the rounds as curiosity grows about this matter. But leave it to superb researcher and frequent contributor to CONTACT, Calvin Burgin, to dig-up THE connection which sends a chill of familiarity and contempt through one's nervous system.

Diligent CONTACT readers have, for many years, read about the elite banksters (banking gangsters) and how they procured (polite term for stole) Mexico's natural resources. We are even re-printing the superb Pat Oliphant cartoon from 8/23/82 which brilliantly captured the money-trap events of the time from the point of view of Mexico's poor working people. We are also, by the way, sharing an El Nino-Greenspan cartoon here, since (par for the season) El Nino has been implicated in causing this event by blathering media stooges. Busy El Nino! Greenspan is closer to the truth—at least symbolically.

Anyway, while smoke continues to blanket much of the southern United States, read what Calvin has discovered about a little-known 1995 memo from Chase Manhattan Bank. For those of you who could smell the collusion of the dark elite in this "Mexico is burning" matter from miles away, this memo is an interesting little connecting link that rings so true it may make you want to throw-up in disgust.

But—who are we mere "useless eaters" to dare to get in the way of something the elite controllers want to possess? The answer to that major challenge has yet to be resolved.

Meanwhile, we sincerely thank the "relay team" of Calvin Burgin and Dr. Al Overholt for providing and delivering this most timely information to share with us all.

5/22/98 CALVIN BURGIN

We have had severe haze for over a couple weeks here in Texas, creating health problems for many. The media says it is from fires caused by drought conditions in Central America and Southern Mexico, especially in Chiapas and the areas of the Zapatistas and Indians.

Droughts happen, but this severe haze has never happened before, so I suspected that there was something unusual that was not being told and decided to take a closer look.

I find that on Jan. 13, 1995, Chase Manhattan Bank's Emerging Markets Group wrote in a memo: "While Chiapas, in our opinion, does not pose a fundamental threat to Mexican political stability, it is perceived to be so by many in the investment community. The government will need to eliminate the Zapatistas to demonstrate their effective control of the national territory and of security policy." [emphasis mine]

The Mexican government is heavily mortgaged to Chase Manhattan. After the newly elected Zedillo government came to power, in February 1995 it launched an offensive against the Zapatistas and the EZLN (Zapatista Army of National Liberation) communities to "eliminate the Zapatistas" as ordered by the banks. They brought-in over 70,000 troops and security forces into Chiapas, and began financing and organizing terrorist organizations to burn the homes and loot the crops of the Indigenous locals.

Chiapas is one of the poorest Mexican states, but it is the richest in undeveloped resources. It contains 81 percent of Mexico's crude oil reserves. The International Monetary Fund is very interested in this, as 78 percent of the oil Mexico produces goes to repay loans to the banks.

Since 1966 over 200 foreigners have been expelled from Mexico for "meddling" in the region. According to the La Jornada newspaper, the government terrorist groups have killed over 800 people. On Dec. 22, for instance, 45 unarmed Tzotzil Indians were massacred. Over 22,000 Indigenous people have been run off their land into mountain hideaway refugee camps.

On May 19th, Don and Marcia Steelman posted a message on the Internet which is called "Chiapas Is Burning". They stated: "The fires that now burn in an almost ruler-straight line from the Oaxaca border to Chiopancingo, on the border with Guatemala tell the story." Watchers have noticed that the fires spread by marching in a straight line, and they do so against prevailing wind. The fires concentrated on the homes, fields, and hideouts of the Indians, and then later spread into massive holocausts.

Others have tried to get access to find out more of the story, but are refused. On May 11, 40 Italians who had tried to look into the situation were expelled by the Mexican government.

Texas and others in the United States offered to help stop the fires, but were refused permission until it became too late. The homes, fields, and forests are already burned.

What must the poor peasants think?

Editor's note: The following is the more detailed, background report from which Calvin wrote the above report. We share it for those of you who are curious about what all is going on down there.

EYEWITNESS REPORT FROM CHIAPAS, MEXICO

From the INTERNET, The Workers World News Service, 5/21/98: [quoting]

By Bill Hackwell, Chiapas, Mexico

[Hackwell is a photo-journalist who participated in an emergency Pastors for Peace caravan from the United States to Chiapas, Mexico, in early May. The delegation delivered 32 tons of humanitarian aid to eight Indigenous communities and the San Carlos Hospital in Altamirano.]

It has been over two years since the Mexican government and the Zapatista Army of National Liberation (EZLN) signed the San Andreas accords. These accords officially recognized the right of Indigenous communities to choose their own leaders and control the natural resources in their territories.

Members of the Pastors for Peace caravan that visited Chiapas in May could see immediately that the Mexican government is not respecting this agreement. Instead of moving towards peace, Chiapas is a war zone. It reminds me of how Vietnam looked when I photographed the war there 30 years ago.

Just to get to the Chiapas border, the emergency caravan had to go through 15 military checkpoints inside Mexico. Once in Chiapas, we saw many Mexican Army convoys and military bases using U.S.-supplied hardware, ranging from Humvees and assault helicopters to army uniforms and everything in between.

Mexico and Colombia are the main recipients of U.S. military aid in Latin America. Over one-third of all officers being trained at Fort Benning School of the Americas are now from the Mexican Army.

The "low-intensity, counter-insurgency" war being carried out against the Indigenous population here is made in the U.S.

U.S. military sales to Mexico rose from $4.8 million in 1996 to $28 million in 1997. Since President Ernesto Zedillo took office in December 1994, spending on the military has doubled. The cost rests on the backs of the Mexican workers.

AUTONOMOUS COMMUNITIES

Despite this growing military presence, autonomous communities that have broken away from control by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) continue to survive. Of 110 municipalities in Chiapas, 38 have declared themselves autonomous communities. This is defined by setting up a ruling council unconnected to the PRI and refusing help from the government.

The caravan visited eight autonomous communities. Near each one there was a big Mexican Army presence. This included checkpoints, army encampments complete with assault vehicles, and active patrols in full combat gear.

Indigenous community leaders told us that they are on red alert because of increased activity by the Army and other state and federal security forces. The heightened tension throughout Chiapas has halted all development projects and disrupted agricultural activity. Basic food crops like corn and beans were not planted this spring in many communities because of fear that the crops would be burned or people attacked in the fields.

In the EZLN highland center of Oventic, Comandante Moises inventoried antibiotics and other medicines brought by the caravan. He stood in front of a community medical clinic adorned with murals of Mexican revolutionary hero Emiliano Zapata, Che Guevara and masked Indigenous women.

At a public amphitheater nearby, large poles with pointed ends stick out of the ground. Moises explained they are to prevent military helicopters from landing.

“There are Army night patrols that come into the center,” he said, “and we are constantly harassed by the helicopters that fly very low. The army will not do this while you are here, or as long as the international observers stay.”

IMPORTANCE OF INTERNATIONAL OBSERVERS

The solidarity of international observers has become essential in the defense of the autonomous communities. Acteal is the village where 45 unarmed men, women and children were brutally massacred in December. A sign there reads: “Welcome to national and international companeros. We do not accept people from the government.”

While the EZLN and its supporters encourage the observers, the Zedillo government is on the attack against [the observers]. The Mexican government is waging a war of genocide and does not want eyewitnesses to tell the world about it.

Since 1996, some 200 foreigners have been expelled from Mexico for “meddling in the country’s internal affairs”. The number of international observers today may be as few as 45.

Mexican immigration officials told the newspaper Reforma that agents were searching for 40 foreigners in Chiapas who are acting as human rights observers “without the correct visas”.

The “correct” way is to register with the government and get an FM3 visa, which specifies where you can go and what you can do. But observers applying for an FM3 are usually turned down. Most people come to Mexico on a tourist visa. That has now become a pretext for expulsion.

At most military checkpoints we encountered immigration agents as well as Judicial Police. In April the newspaper Novedades actually published a list, complete with visa numbers, of 47 foreigners acting as human-rights observers.

THE REAL MEDDLING

While Zedillo attacks foreigners sympathetic to the Indigenous people of Chiapas, the real interventionists in Mexico are the International Monetary Fund and U.S. corporations.

Since the North American Free Trade Agreement took effect in January 1994, the Mexican government's debt has reached $170 billion. That has set off a fire sale of national industries once protected by the Mexican Constitution.

U.S. companies are poised to buy all 57 airports in Mexico, as well as essential railroad and telecommunication lines. The national oil company, Pemex, remains nationalized, but 78 percent of the oil it produces goes to the U.S. to pay loan interest.

While Chiapas is the poorest state in Mexico, it is the richest in untapped resources. It contains 81 percent of Mexico's crude oil reserves. U.S. corporations see the Zapatista movement as an obstacle to the exploitation of this area.

On Jan. 13, 1995, Chase Manhattan Bank's Emerging Markets Group wrote in a memo: "While Chiapas, in our opinion, does not pose a fundamental threat to Mexican political stability, it is perceived to be so by many in the investment community. The government will need to eliminate the Zapatistas to demonstrate their effective control of the national territory and of security policy [emphasis mine]."

LOW-INTENSITY WARFARE AND PARAMILITARY GROUPS

Right after the release of this Chase Manhattan memo, the newly elected Zedillo government took its cue from the U.S. financial institutions to which it is mortgaged. In February 1995 it launched a two-part offensive against the Zapatistas and the EZLN communities.

Today over 70,000 armed troops and security forces are stationed in Chiapas. Most are camped in the eastern part near the Lacandon forest, where the Zapatista army is strongest. The intent is to cut off and isolate the EZLN from the autonomous communities in the center of the state.

The other significant part of the government offensive is the growth of paramilitary groups armed and financed by the PRI. These groups are terrorist organizations similar to the Ku Klux Klan in the United States.

According to La Jornada newspaper, since 1996 these groups have killed over 800 people. They have conducted a campaign of burning homes and looting Indigenous crops.

The Dec. 22 Acteal massacre of 45 unarmed Tzotzil Indians was carried out by one of these groups, armed with Army-issued assault rifles. An elite Army unit had been seen with the paramilitaries the day before the massacre.

According to Enlace Civil, the civilian link to the EZLN in San Cristobal de las Casas, over 22,000 Indigenous people have been displaced and are living in the mountains or in refugee camps as a direct result of paramilitary terror sanctioned by the Mexican government.

WOMEN ON THE FRONT LINES

As our caravan neared the autonomous village of Polho, we saw rows of women, their faces covered, guarding the entrance. U.S. military-issued Humvees patrolled the main road.

Yet the women were not intimidated. They have been conducting a heroic front-line defense of many of these communities. Here, and in the neighboring village of Xoyep [spell??], women with babies on their backs have repeatedly repulsed Army patrols trying to enter.

Their determined faces reflect a struggle that predates the Zapatista uprising by 500 years.

The flashpoint of the struggle recently shifted to a small, isolated community in the eastern canyons of Chiapas, Taniperlas.

The town had declared itself autonomous on April 10. Immediately, Mexican Army troops along with Judicial and Public Security Police invaded the newly independent community. Twelve international observers were arrested and deported. Six Mexican nationalists were imprisoned. Hundreds of military troops continue to occupy the community.

Some 140 male EZLN supporters fled to the surrounding mountains while women and children remain under house arrest.

The emergency caravan decided on April 24 to attempt to deliver food and messages of peace to the people of Taniperlas. After driving 75 miles from Ocosingo on a small dirt road, we delivered seven tons of rice, beans, corn, sugar and salt to the displaced men in the highlands.

It was carried on the backs of mules, EZLN supporters and the caravanistas. As the sun began to go down, the aid was safely carried away from the heavily patrolled road to Taniperlas. When asked how they would get the food into the occupied town, the men smiled and said, “We have our ways.”

PARAMILITARIES HARASS CARAVAN

The next morning the caravan proceeded to the town. The Rev. Lucius Walker informed public security agents and PRI sympathizers that the caravan was there on a pastoral visit. It was at this point that paramilitary members allied with the PRI appeared. Many had clubs.

Unfazed, members of the caravan joined in a prayer for peace and then proceeded to leave. Frustrated at the success of the caravan’s mission, the PRI sympathizers tried to block the road and threw a rock, breaking one of the vehicle’s windows.

This incident got international media attention—not the occupation by the military. The reports made it sound as though the people were hostile to the caravan.

The solidarity movement worldwide needs to continue to expose the U.S. government's role in the Mexican ruling class' war of extermination against the Indigenous population. The war in Chiapas has slipped from the headlines, but this should not be taken as a sign that the struggle is over.

In many respects the situation is more grave. More confrontations are sure to come. The popular movement in Mexico not only welcomes international observers, but says they are urgently needed to expose the insidious warfare being conducted against them.

Editor's note: On May 11, the Mexican government deported 40 Italians who had come to Chiapas as human-rights supporters.

Note from Dr. Al: With stories like this we have to be very discerning and most of all ask for guidance from above while reading.

The Chase Manhattan Bank's investors are worried, so they give orders to kill off an Indigenous population!!

This story makes more logic than most other stories about what is going on there—knowing, as we do, the tricks of the elite land-stealers.

This also gives an answer for the fires—the burning of their food crops and in general burning out the people of Chiapas and destroying their ability to exist on their lands. The burnt land doesn't destroy the natural resources of minerals and oil—it enhances their access because the lands are cleared of jungles and people.

This is genocide. May God help us all.

TREATED RATS

REGAIN FUNCTION AFTER BRAIN DAMAGE

“Men Stumble Over The Truth From Time To Time,
But Most Pick Themselves Up And Hurry Off
As If Nothing Happened.”

—Winston Churchill

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/19/98: [quoting]

Brain-damaged rats that were given injections of an experimental treatment grew new nerve fibers that once again let them climb ropes, grasp food pellets and remove sticky tape from their front paws, scientists reported Monday.

Experts said the research could help lead to new approaches to spinal cord and brain injuries in humans. These injuries are particularly devastating because damaged nerve fibers in adults do not regenerate on their own.

The growth of new nerve fibers in the rats enabled them to recover their ability to function to “an amazing degree”, said Martin Schwab of the Institute for Brain Research at the University of Zurich in Switzerland. “If you test these animals for hand function, precision movements, you find a recovery of the behavior which is almost 100 percent.”

The study by Schwab and his colleagues at the University of Zurich appears in the June issue of the journal Nature Neuroscience.

The researchers first cut through nerve fibers in a small area of the rats’ brainstem, where the upper part of the spinal cord joins the front of the brain. That knocked out fine motor control of the animals’ front limbs. In humans, that area controls such movements as typing on a keyboard.

Regeneration of brain and spinal cord nerves is naturally inhibited by proteins in the protective sheaths of the nerve fibers. So Schwab and his colleagues devised an approach to neutralize the proteins with a specially engineered antibody, called IN-1.

Rats injected with the antibody sprouted healthy, new nerve fibers in undamaged regions of their brains and spinal cords that took over for the damaged ones. The nerves sprouted and built new connections “which automatically seem to be the right connections”, Schwab said. The damaged fibers also showed some regeneration.

The ability of the antibody to promote new compensatory growth, rather than just repair damaged nerve fibers, could be useful in treating stroke, the researchers said. Strokes tend to damage one side of the brain only.

The human central nervous system contains growth inhibitors similar to those found in the rat. Schwab already is collaborating with a large biotechnology company to neutralize them with antibodies.

“It’s an important and interesting study,” said Michael Beattie, a neuroscience professor at Ohio State University who specializes in spinal cord injury and regeneration. He called Schwab’s results “very encouraging”.

“This study re-emphasizes the role of the noninjured nervous system in compensating for the loss of function after damage,” he said. “The work they’ve done suggests that they’re on the right track to understanding how to produce therapies that can enhance repair and recovery of function.” Story Landis, scientific director of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, part of the National Institutes of Health called the study “very promising”, she said.

“What makes it promising is they’ve shown a remarkable regrowth of axions (nerve fibers), sprouting of axions and functional recovery. This should definitely be tested in primates,” she said. [End quoting]

If only more medical technology were made available to the public, rather than being kept hidden for private financial reasons.

DRUG CARTELS STUNG

Millions Seized In ‘Dirty’ Money

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/19/98: [quoting]

Federal prosecutors announced the end Monday of the largest drug-profits laundering investigation ever, an undercover probe that started in Los Angeles, and spanned six nations, leading to more than 100 arrests.

Operation Casablanca became public when indictments of 97 people were unsealed U.S. District Court in Los Angeles. The banks were accused of laundering money for Colombian and Mexican drug cartels. “Today we have hurt the drug cartels where it hurts the most—in their pocketbooks,” said U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin in a written statement. The investigation started in 1995 and revolved around a warehouse in Santa Fe Springs, where undercover agents said they received drug money for deposit in bank accounts they had opened. Investigators said more than $65 million, which they believe was drug money from the Mexico-based Juarez and Colombia-based Cali cartels, was processed by the banks.

“Some of that money made it back to the drug deals,” said U.S. Attorney spokesman Thom Mrozek.

Federal officials were not sure how much of that money was seized directly, but said $35 million in cash, more than two tons of cocaine and four tons of marijuana were confiscated in spin-off investigations related to the money-laundering probe. [End quoting]

No doubt, Rubin and his gangster cohorts are overjoyed since they are probably the biggest profiteers of this confiscation. Does anyone really think that this cache of narcotics will be destroyed?? Does anyone really think that this “dirty” money will be destroyed or handed over for a worthy cause such as helping people break their addictions? I have very serious doubts. This was a sting operation used for one cartel to gain control over their competitors while we-the-people footed all the expenses of the operation—is my take on this.

SEAGRAM SEWAGE

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Seagram, Inc., the Canadian liquor giant owned by Edgar Bronfman, head of the World Jewish Congress, has earned the first “Silver Sewer” award. The award was presented by Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut who says Seagram, through its subsidiary, Universal, has “lowered not only themselves but us all” with media fare such as talk shows hosted by Jerry Springer and Sally Jessy Raphael. Seagram is also coowner of Interscope Records, which features Marilyn Manson, who targets similar trash to kids. [End quoting]

Thank God for a congressman willing to call it like it is. If only 400+ more would do so.

DIVIDE AND CONQUER

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Traditionally, non-English-speaking immigrants to the U.S. sent their children to public school where they quickly learned the English language. The children, in turn, taught their parents. More recently, bilingual classes, enhanced with federal funding, were sold to the public as easing the language transition for kids. They have proven instead to hinder their learning of English while making excellent vehicles for political indoctrination. California residents have a citizens’ initiative on the ballot, Proposition 227 to abolish bilingual education, even though by 2010 over two-thirds of California’s school children will be Hispanic, Asian or Black. The education empire and the federal administration oppose the initiative. [End quoting]

Divide and conquer is always the elite’s and their minions’ game. Assimilation through common language is a thorn in the elite’s—you know what.

LOSING PROPOSITION

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Since NAFTA, Mexico’s auto exports to the U.S. have more than doubled, to $23 billion. Meanwhile, U.S. auto exports to Mexico have grown about 9 percent, to $8.3 billion. Greg Woodhead, an economist for the AFLCIO, reports that there are 18 million more cars “on the market” than people will buy. This oversupply portends a profit squeeze which will hit the American autoworker hardest, as he receives three times the Mexican (or Asian) factory salary. [End quoting]

Look for many more layoffs, in a lot of industries, as the economy continues to “boom”.

NO HONOR AMONG

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting]

For unannounced reasons, the transnational agents hammering out the Multinational Agreement on Investment (MAI) in Paris, have declared a six month hiatus. The MAI is to be presented as a treaty constituting the final step to completion of worldwide dominance over each nation’s sovereignty by purely commercial interests. [End quoting]

We have six months to lay the pressure on congress and all national leaders to prevent this from being passed. Don’t miss and waste this opportunity.

ALL BELIEVERS IN FOSTER SUICIDE COULD MEET IN A PHONE BOOTH

Excerpt from THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/19/98: [quoting]

A radio broadcast between Tom Valentine and Christopher Ruddy of the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review. [Bold for Tom Valentine.]

Ken Starr has been under fire for calling in members of Monica Lewinsky’s family to testify, but he’s never put Vince Foster’s family on the grill and asked them to testify. If anything, his immediate family would surely be able to shed some light on things.

Mrs. Foster was questioned by the FBI but I don’t think any of them have ever been put before a grand jury.

Didn’t one of Ken Starr’s chief investigators on the Foster case quit in disgust?

Yes, this is the story of Miguel Rodriguez, a very tenacious prosecutor (who happens to be a liberal) who went into the case, thinking that there wasn’t anything there, and when he got into the case, he said, “My God, this may be a murder. At the very least there’s some sort of cover-up involved. We need to investigate further.”

Rodriguez told Starr there were some problems about using the FBI to investigate since the FBI might somehow be implicated. But Starr didn’t let him do his job and in several months he was forced out. Two of his own assistants quit over this. And who does Starr bring in to handle the investigation and close it down but someone who was close to the Clinton White House? Mark Tuohey.

Tuohey signed off on the case, saying it was a suicide. Then Tuohey quit Starr’s office and joined the law firm that represents Hillary Clinton’s former law firm, the Rose Law Firm, before Starr’s own office. This goes to show you how close everything is in this investigation.

Why haven't our television commentators brought this up?

They don't want to talk about this. They have decided that the public should not hear about this. They've decided that this is an issue that is not acceptable for the public. I think we're going down a dangerous path and that there's been a terrible abuse of power in this administration.

Start with the day that Clinton came into office. He fired all the U.S. Attorneys. He later fired the FBI director. He took over the White House Travel Office and attempted to put Billy Dale, the head of the travel office, in jail on trumped-up charges.

[Consider] the fund-raising scandals; the FBI "filegate" scandal. I think this is serious stuff. The fact that we've let this go by and that Congress hasn't measured up to the threat that this poses is very worrisome. [End quoting]

Do we really think one brother of this evil brotherhood will not cover for the others against "we the people"? Lawyers are "brothers" in their English Bar brotherhood, and Billy, Hillary, and Ken Starr are members.

ECONOMIC CONTRAST

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Taiwan, for the first time in 17 years, has a quarterly trade deficit of $60 million. It's government attributes the red ink to the collapse of finances in Asian nations resulting in canceled orders and a dearth of new orders. In the past 27 years the U.S. has been in the black on trade only twice, and then in very modest figures. Our current trade deficit is $12 billion per month. [End quoting]

This also will result in many layoffs in our country, in the midst of that "booming" economy.

FBI SHARPSHOOTER CLEARED OF KILLING

A judge ruled he was acting within his authority when he fired at a separatist's wife during the Ruby Ridge siege.

Excepted from THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, 5/15/98: [quoting]

A federal judge on Thursday dismissed an involuntary manslaughter charge against an FBI sharpshooter for the death of White separatist Randy Weaver's wife during the siege at Ruby Ridge.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ruled in an 18-page order that Lon Horiuchi was acting within the scope of his federal authority and was honestly discharging his duties when he fired the shot that killed Vicki Weaver on Aug. 22, 1992. [End quoting]

Notice how they use the buzz-word White separatist. Also the judge has just given carte blanche for indiscriminate killings as long as you're wearing a federal enforcement badge. Are we going to be the next victim of this sanctioned manslaughter, or are we going to stop it?

LAWYERS: RUSH TO CASH IS DAMAGING STANDARDS

Excerpted from THE ST. PETERSBURG TIMES, 4/12/98: [quoting]

Executives at Sporicidin Co. figured they needed a few good lawyers back in 1991. Instead, they wound up with a few dozen.

Altogether, 53 lawyers and paralegals from the Washington law offices of Baker & Hostetler logged time trying to convince federal regulators that the Rockville, Md., company's sterilizing solution should be allowed on the market. After spending about $830,000 in legal fees in less than a year and a half, Sporicidin's executives hired an auditor.

Among the auditor's findings: $24,053 for injunction papers that were never filed, $5,891 for seven people to research one statute and $177,251 for time spent by the army of staffers to update one another on progress in the case.

"They were just throwing lawyers at the problem and billed heavily from the word go," said John Toothman, an attorney for Sporicidin.

Lawyers representing Baker & Hostetler dispute some of these particulars, and say the overall fee reflected the complexity of the case, which required negotiations with three government agencies. Further, they say, executives at Sporicidin greatly complicated the work by issuing contradictory instructions to the firm's lawyers.

Whatever the outcome of this case—now part of a pending malpractice suit—it comes at a moment when many corporate attorneys say their profession is being overwhelmed by pressure to snare clients and bring money into their firms. Those pressures, according to academics and lawyers, are profoundly changing the culture of corporate law by giving rise to a bill-or-die ethos that many lawyers find dispiriting, yet impossible to ignore.

Professors who study the business of law say associates and partners are billing hours that suggest superhuman concentration, outright fibbing or an eagerness to log time even if the expense isn't a worthwhile one for clients. And firms are less vigilant about making sure they don't represent anyone whose interests could collide with those of clients they already represent, according to the former head of the American Bar Association's Associates Ethics and Responsibility Committee.

Occasionally, clients get miffed and sue, but the public rarely hears much about lawyer misconduct because, unlike doctors, corporate attorneys nearly always resolve their problems in confidential, out-of-court settlements. [End quoting]

This is merely the icing on the cake of a profession that has generated more sad-but-true joke books than any other.

“BUCKETFULS” OF DNA NOW POSSIBLE AND HUMANITY MAY BE DISPENSABLE

Excerpted from <www.4bypass.com>: [quoting]

“Watch out, people,” said the introduction to a recent Internet posting that was followed by a news item. “This could be a final key in the process that would complete with the near-extinction of all people on the Earth. Since 1973, the Human Genome Project has been grabbing and storing up genetic samples from all the diverse genome [haploid set of chromosomes with the genes that contain the genetic material of an organism] fields in the world. Why?? They could repopulate the Earth in a few decades in the case of some global catastrophe. Since Henry Kissinger, Ted Turner, the Royal Family and other globalist elites have boldly stated the need to reduce world population up to 95 percent, this could be a news story of major import.

“News story of major import?” Paranoid delusions? Reality-based uneasiness? You decide:

“By drawing upon Nature’s own DNA-copying techniques, University of Rochester chemist Eric Kool has developed minute rings of DNA—dubbed “rolling circles that can crank out more copies of the genetic template more cheaply than ever before”, read the Jan. 21 dispatch in the American Reporter. The U.S. Patent Office has approved the patent, according to the article. “It’s now feasible to make bucketfuls of DNA, an amount we can’t even begin to approach with other amplification techniques,” Kool said. [End quoting]

This sounds like sci-fi, but it ceratinly isn’t. Slowly but surely the public is being made aware of secret technology, now way down the road of development.

U.N. OFFICIALS CONSIDER
FEWER INSPECTIONS IN IRAQ

From THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, 5/15/98: [quoting]

In a compromise reached by U.S. and Russian diplomats, the Security Council agreed Thursday to consider scaling back nuclear inspections in Iraq—but not right away.

The council said Iraq must first make “substantive clarifications” about its nuclear weapons program, which Iraq claims to have dismantled in 1991, when the inspections began under terms for ending the Persian Gulf War. [End quoting]

Don’t think the elite are going to lay off of Iraq unless they change focus to some other country. The agenda of a Middle East war is far too strong in the mind of Israel for there to be any move toward genuine peace.

SANCTIONS' END SOUGHT

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/10/98: [quoting]

Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark and an American Roman Catholic bishop vowed Saturday to push for an end to U.N. trade sanctions on Iraq. Clark and the Most Rev. Thomas Gumbleton, the auxiliary bishop of Detroit, made the pledge as 80 American aid workers handed over $4 million worth of medicine, vitamins and medical supplies to Iraqi health authorities. Such visits to Iraq by Americans technically violate U.N. Security Council sanctions. [End quoting]

Maybe they can make a little headway toward stopping the genocide there.

WIRETAP REQUESTS HIGH

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98: [quoting]

Law enforcement agents sought a record number of court orders last year to allow them to secretly listen in on more than 2 million private conversations, a government wiretap report shows. The 1,186 wiretap requests approved in 1997 marked a 3 percent increase over 1996. [End quoting]

And this is probably a very, very small percentage of the truthful number—let alone all of the ones done without a request.

6,000 GUN EXPULSIONS

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98: [quoting]

More than 6,000 students were expelled in 1996-97 for bringing firearms to public schools, the Education Department reported Friday.

The report was a first, so no comparison is possible. [End quoting]

A worse situation than the “wild West” days when adults carried guns!

S. AFRICA EASES SEX LAW

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98: [quoting]

A high court judge on Friday struck down apartheid-era laws against gay and lesbian sex, declaring them a violation of South Africa's new constitution. Judge Jonathana Heher said the laws were a relic of intolerance, ignorance and fear of what is different. [End quoting]

Another step in the destruction of S. Africa.

200,000 UPROOTED

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/10/98: [quoting]

Thailand—As many as 200,000 ethnic Karen people have either been forcibly relocated or are hiding in the jungles of eastern Myanmar to escape the army, a research group said Saturday. More than 30 percent of the population in eastern Myanmar has been uprooted and displaced, the Burma Ethnic Research Group said in a report. [End quoting]

The elite are never satisfied unless they destroy a country's families and social life. Talk about cancer—what else is the elite?? When we get cancer in our bodies we make a bold effort to destroy it. Why, oh why, don't we make just as strong an effort to rid our society of this cancer—the elite—which is far worse and the worst disease this world has ever seen??

TO BE RADICAL

From THE NATIONAL INTEREST #14, Australia: [quoting]

When I said that World Heritage was a con, to transfer ownership of our national parks to world financiers, people laughed. I was a radical.

Now we cannot access even the crystal-clear potable water that runs to waste from Fraser Island; people put their heads in the sand and discuss the weather.

When the IMF created the World Assets Register and put ridiculously low prices on all of the world's major parks, nobody stirred.

When the IMF started swapping Pacific national parks, such as Luneta National Park (Philippines), in exchange for reductions in their national debt, doubters pretended that they did not hear.

When Australia held a conference at Fraser Island to discuss privatisation of the Great Sandy Region's national parks, the Fraser Coast Chronicle reported the event but it meant nothing to the locals.

When the parks have been swapped to overseas interests the locals will be up in arms but, like the cavalry at Custer's Last Stand, too late.

Perhaps I won't then be called a radical. That won't help our children regain their heritage.

The parks are ours and control of those parks is our responsibility. The ALP/DEM/LIB/NAT/GREENS cannot legally cede these parks to foreign governments. Stop the rot right now. Get active. [End quoting]

Just another example of elite control over all valuable resources.

THE BANK SWINDLE

From THE NATIONAL INTEREST #14, Australia: [quoting]

The government, in the Keating era, changed our laws to let the foreign banks in. Under Contract Law all loans, to be legal, must have a fixed interest rate, a fixed time to pay and a readily determined payout figure.

The foreign banks were allowed to put interest rates to any figure they and their political protegés wanted. They did. Interest rates went to 20% and 30%. Few could pay. The banks foreclosed.

Bank assets went from $87 billion to $383 billion in five years, a profit of $296 billion. They took about $90,000 average from every family in Australia. All foreclosures were illegal. We were betrayed. [End quoting]

The same con game will be used over and over again until we stop it.

ORGANICS PROPOSAL DRAWS FIRE

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98: [quoting]

Pro-organic groups are urging the Agriculture Department to scrap its proposed rules on organic foods, which drew more than 150,000 overwhelmingly negative comments from across the nation.

Major reasons opposition arose were that the department left open the possibilities that organic food could be sold even if genetically engineered, irradiated to kill bacteria or fertilized with sewage sludge.

“This is by far the worst beating that any federal agency has taken on a proposed rule,” said Roger Blobaum, a Washington agricultural consultant.

According to an analysis by the group Organic Watch, more than 83,000 people wrote, faxed or e-mailed comments opposed to allowing genetic engineering in organic foods and only 18 were in favor. Better than 78,000 people opposed irradiation.

Forty-eight members of Congress signed a letter to USDA Secretary Dan Glickman opposing the rules. They say they run counter to “historical practices of the industry” and don’t protect consumers.

Organic farm groups have identified 66 objections to the rules. Among them are that state and private certifiers could not have tougher standards than the federal.

Brad Marman of the USDA’s marketing service said the agency would analyze the tens of thousands of comments and “perhaps rewrite parts of it to reflect public comment.” [End quoting]

Proof again, when enough of us get off our assets and speak up, something can be done—and without guns. The crooks hate publicity.

VEGETABLE VACCINES

Biomed industry booming with renewed interest

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Tinkering with plants in her USC lab, Lisa Welter dreams of one day vaccinating people against a potentially deadly disease by feeding them genetically altered vegetables.

In Duarte, John Rossi is testing a way to implant a kind of a molecular version of scissors in human cells to shred the virus that causes AIDS.

Throughout Southern California, scientists searching for new ways to fight disease have begun looking past drugs to deoxyribonucleic acid—DNA, the chemical blueprint that shapes everything living.

And the Los Angeles region has become a hotbed for a field—and an industry—that promises to change the way doctors understand, prevent and treat illnesses. Instead of attacking symptoms, scientists are studying how a person's genes, which determine everything from hair color to height, cause or contribute to disease.

Tinkering with faulty genes to combat disease is called gene therapy.

“We used to look at the patient, and then we got sophisticated and looked at the proteins involved, and now we're looking right at the gene,” said David Rimoin, the Stephen Spielberg chairman of pediatrics at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

This revolution has been under way for years in Los Angeles universities and biotech companies, and it has already made great strides.

Scientists have pinpointed genes that play a part in ailments ranging from gum disease to various kinds of cancer, and the list continues to grow.

“Virtually every human disease has a genetic component,” said Laurence Kedes, who heads the Institute of Genetic Medicine at the University of Southern California.

For all the strides that have been made in gene therapy, however, scientists caution that progress often takes years. Many experiments replacing defective genes or adding new ones have met with little success. And even the basic work of tracking down individual genes and understanding their functions can be maddeningly complex.

“It's a slow, slogging process,” Kedes said. “You can have hundreds of people working on a single gene, and it will take them a decade to understand it.” [End quoting]

Sounds good, but I hope you don't trust these people. Look how easy we could be inoculated with anything. Prepare for the worst.

MARINES SENT TO INDONESIA

Excerpted from the INTERNET, 5/21/98: [quoting]

Source: USIA

Just received word that the Marines have been sent to Indonesia “just in case”. Will follow up with news releases as soon as they cross my desk. From this Pentagon briefing it appears to be pretty routine. We’ll let you know what transpires. [End quoting]

Yeah, just routine—when the area is “going to hell in a handbasket”. The IMF bastards are cleaning up using our freedom-loving soldiers to do their dastardly work.

INDONESIA

Foreign Naval Presence Builds Around Indonesia

From the INTERNET, 5/20/98: [quoting]

Australia has carried on with scheduled joint naval and air exercises with the Indonesian military this week, despite that country’s apparent impending collapse. Three frigates and a destroyer, approximately a third of Australia’s navy, along with three Australian F-111 bombers and a P-3 Orion reconnaissance aircraft, will be joined by a similar number of Indonesian forces in the exercises. The exercises, titled “New Horizons”, will take place off the Indonesian port of Surabaya. The Australian government acknowledged the sensitive timing of the maneuvers, but stated that the long-planned exercises, which take place within the two countries’ bilateral defense accord, were not subject to internal Indonesian events. Nevertheless, Australia, like other countries, is arranging for the potential evacuation of its citizens from Indonesia on chartered civilian Boeing 747 jets.

Taiwan and Japan have also sent naval forces to Indonesian waters, though not as part of joint exercises. Taiwan has a three-ship fleet cruising near Indonesia, for possible use in evacuating Taiwanese nationals from Indonesia. Japan has also dispatched two patrol boats to Singapore for possible use in evacuating Japanese nationals. The two countries have each sent military C-130 transport aircraft and chartered civilian airliners to Indonesia for use in evacuating their citizens.

Malaysia has placed its coastal troops on full alert and has stepped up sea and air patrols to defend against a “possible sneak landing by Indonesians” fleeing the country’s unrest, according to the Malaysian Defense Minister, cited in the daily Nanyang Siang Pau newspaper. Malaysia has deployed 10 vessels to patrol its waters against any possible mass refugee exodus. Malaysia is also preparing for the possible evacuation of its nationals from Indonesia by ferry or civilian airlines.

Indonesia’s near and distant neighbors are concerned about more than just the immediate security of their citizens in the country. Indonesia has a history of externalizing its internal problems, using the nationalism card to trump economic failure. This was especially the case under Sukarno, whose domestic radical populism was accompanied by aggressive, confrontational external politics, targeted in particular at New Guinea and Malaysia. The potential for Indonesia to once again revert to aggressive, nationalistic foreign politics has its neighbors concerned over, among other things, the security of Indonesian waters.

Australia's naval exercises with Indonesia serve two purposes. Australia first and foremost wants stability in Indonesia, and if that can be accomplished through the careful return to and maintenance of the status quo ante, then just as well. However, if Indonesia begins to collapse, Australia is committed to making sure Indonesian instability does not spill over into Australia's sphere of influence, which extends roughly from New Guinea to the Cocos Islands.

Two other potential external impacts of an Indonesian collapse are of critical concern to other countries. The first is the security of foreign firms operating in Indonesia, particularly those in oil and other extractive industries which would be ripe for nationalization. The second is the security of the flow of oil from and through Indonesia. Countries such as Taiwan and Japan, which are highly dependent on Indonesian oil and on Middle East oil passing through the Strait of Malacca, are extremely worried about the potential effect an Indonesian collapse could have on their fuel supply. We note in particular the deployment of Japanese vessels to Singapore, on the Strait. Should that oil flow become threatened, they will be forced to turn, at least in the short term, to Australia to keep the sea lanes open. The nearest significant US Navy presence is the two Carrier Battle Groups committed in the Persian Gulf, while the Seventh Fleet has a frigate and a destroyer deployed in the Philippine Sea. The potential for a constriction in the oil supply, either through the temporary disruption of Indonesian production or through threats to traffic through the Strait of Malacca, while an unexpected boon to Indonesia's cash-strapped OPEC allies, is a nightmare for already economically unsettled Japan and other Asian nations. [End quoting]

Notice that the elite are taking our attention from the Middle East—so what do they have in their evil minds for that area for the immediate future?? You can bet it isn't good for us. The fires—literally and figuratively are heating up—fast—all over the world. How many of us will get burned from inaction?

THE SHOWER

Neither Rain,
Nor Hail, Nor Sleet...

From ANGELS ON EARTH, Mar./Apr. 1996, Guideposts, 39 Seminary Hill Rd., Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

The Sun that beat down on my Volkswagen had parched the farmers' fields dry. It was another hot, dusty day in the Florida panhandle. The temperatures were recordbreaking; we hadn't seen rain in weeks.

Every other Saturday I had been following these dirt roads through the most remote areas of my north Florida town to deliver mail. The ad for a part-time mail carrier had caught my eye seven months earlier. My husband and I were having financial problems—among others—so I had inquired about the job.

“It's the most difficult of all our rural routes,” the postmaster told me. “Six hundred eighty-four homes along eighty-six miles. It's too much for a woman."

"What does it pay?" I asked, unfazed.

"About a hundred dollars a day," he said. "But you drive your own car and use your own gas."

I figured I could work two days a month. The extra two hundred dollars would make all the difference.

Several weeks after I took the civil service exam the postmaster called to say I had made the highest score. When I met with him he warned me that my work as a legal secretary hadn't prepared me for the rigors of being a mail carrier, lifting heavy bags and packages. He emphasized how isolated the route was. I took the position anyway.

My first day was the Saturday before Christmas, and the regular mail had more than doubled because of the holiday. Unfamiliar with the names and addresses on my route, I spent more than five hours sorting, stacking and bundling the letters and packages in gigantic bags.

My small yellow Volkswagen groaned under their weight as I headed out. The only directions I had were 14 pages of handwritten notes. After hours of following advice like "Take the right fork at the big pine tree and go 3.2 miles to mobile home" and "Turn left at the little white house with the big black dog," I managed to get my car stuck in a sandpit. By the time I dragged myself back to the post office that evening the postmaster had called the sheriff's department to report me missing in action.

"Lord," I prayed that night, "I believe you gave me this job. I need you to be on the route with me. I can't do it alone."

Over the next few months I learned the addresses. I got to know the people behind the names too—a friendly wave or a cookie were reminders that God was helping me. But just when I got the hang of my job, my marriage fell apart. In April my husband left town, leaving me and our two children. Money, which had been a problem, became a crisis. The kids were seven and twelve, both of them eating so much and growing so fast I could hardly keep up. There were times that spring when I was rolling pennies to buy groceries. I used the Saturdays in my VW bug to talk things over with God.

The warm days of spring turned into the scorching days of summer. When I delivered mail I packed a cooler with ice and Cokes, and kept a hand towel on my lap to wipe the dust off my face. Sometimes I drove on the wrong side of the road just to stay in the shade.

Finally there came that hot, dry afternoon in July when I didn't think I could take it anymore. I was feeling light-headed and my cooler was empty, the ice a warm puddle sloshing around the bottom. No one on my route was home to pour me a glass of water. Halfway through my shift I began to feel sorry for myself. In the thick, stagnant heat, I stopped the car, put my head on the steering wheel and cried.

"Oh, Lord, I've gone as far as I can go today," I sobbed. "I don't have the strength to deal with my problems. I need this job. But today, Lord, I feel too sick and hot to go on."

I sat there choking on tears that tasted like salt and dust, too worn out to move. Just then I felt a slight breeze coming through the windows. Lifting my head, I noticed a small gray cloud moving toward my car. As it came closer and closer, I stepped outside. The cloud seemed to linger directly overhead.

Standing on that dirt road with my face turned to the heavens, I felt drops of rain. First a fine mist, then a sweet, gentle shower. It rinsed the dust from my arms and the tears from my cheeks. I basked in its spray. And when I had had enough, it stopped. Thank you, God, I thought, feeling cool and refreshed. Then I noticed: The fields and road surrounding my car were still dry! That little gray cloud had rained just for me. “God, you are amazing,” I said.

A few days later our thirsty little town got the downpour we’d been waiting for. By then my spirit and my strength had been renewed. A shower from a small gray cloud had soothed my soul. —Debra Hill, McDonough, Georgia—[End quoting]

He certainly does perform many wonders.

CHAPTER 7

RE-ESTABLISH THE CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC OR START ANEW?

PART 2 IN A SERIES

by Ray Bilger 5/20/98

Mohandas K. (a.k.a. Mahatma or “great soul”) Gandhi (1869-1948) is credited with making the astute observation that “The world has enough for everyman’s need, but not enough for everyman’s greed”. Seen another way, it should be obvious that societies and economies cannot have unlimited growth when the Earth has only limited resources. Hence, any concept of a realizable and achievable just government must be inextricably linked with the concept of our Earth as having finite resources. Bigger is not necessarily better. We must be realistic about what we plan to do today, but our planning must go beyond tomorrow. A balanced approach is the only perpetually sustainable approach.

In a perfect world it would seem that there would be no need for government at all, for all would honor and respect all others. As Thomas Jefferson said in 1782, “It is error alone which needs the support of government. Truth can stand by itself.” So, since we are where we are in time and space, perhaps we should try to build a just world government.

Gandhi also advanced the idea of “an exploitation-free society”. In other words, we must be concerned with the needs of people, rather than the needs of the system. The system must be tailored to the needs of human beings. The idea of a government of, by and for the people is a nice idea on paper, but in a world such as ours it will take some work to make it a reality.

“That government is best which governs least.” This must be our cornerstone and our goal, as it entails the concept of more localized governance with everyone being responsible for making things work in their own communities.

Our active participation in the governing process has, until now, been cleverly engineered out of the system, thereby making us dependant on others whom we have elected to do our thinking for us. And those who have done our thinking for us have been corruptible and, thus, have become greedy and have not had our best interests at heart. Unfortunately, our government has not simply ignored our problems, it has perpetuated them. It is time for a change.

Now that the Earth is as populated as it is, balance and harmony must be a significant part of the foundation of any proposal for a just world government. And, although we are physical beings, we must cease our over-emphasis on our physical bodies, our physical world and physical environment, and instead express the fact that we simultaneously exist as spiritual beings. But more than that, we must understand that we are spiritual beings first, last and foremost.

We were spiritual beings before we made the conscious decision to come down here to experience in this human physical dimension, and we will still be spiritual beings after we leave this three-dimensional plane, with the added benefit of what we have learned in our journey here to help us in our own spiritual evolution. And what we will ultimately realize, if we think enough about it, is that how much we benefit from this experience is dependant upon how much we are able to help our Creator with HIS Bigger Plans for this planet, of which our own individual plans are but a part.

And what are those Bigger Plans? They appear to be to see how we will do (with all of the multi-faceted distractions that a world such as ours holds), and what we will do, when left on our own, to create a just and better world for all human beings.

You see, when we really think about it, it seems quite plausible that, in this vast universe of ours, there must be many, many inhabited worlds and that our world may well be rather unevolved and even barbaric compared to some others. It is completely conceivable that there are worlds where all life is held sacred, where there is no violence, or terrorism, or mass exploitation by people who feel the overwhelming need to have total power and control over others; worlds where the Creator is recognized by all as the Source of all life, love, joy and abundance; worlds where all things coexist in harmony and balance.

Obviously, our world has not yet reached that point. Ours is a planet where we can all learn our lessons about what is good and what is evil by experiencing every situation in life as an opportunity to learn some lesson.

What we have today in our world is starvation in the Third World, overpopulation, poverty, injustice, inequality, frustration, despair, crime, aggression, dehumanizing technological development, the befouling of our Earth, air and waters by industrial, agricultural, and individual pollution, overtaxed social amenities, etc., etc.

Since what each of us does ultimately affects each and every other human being on Earth in some way, the solution to our world's problems will not be achieved if only one nation chooses to do something about them. The peoples of the world all appear to have the same basic needs, but the world's many governments do not appear to be run by those who wish to see those needs met. Thus, the need for the peoples of the world to unite to now set up a Just World Governance System.

Some would argue that we already have the basis of this in the United Nations. But anyone who understands how and why the U.N. was set up, by whom it was organized and established, and who actually runs it from behind the scenes, will know that it is an evil front for powerful international bankers and industrialists who are bent on keeping us perpetually at war with each other, and in exploiting the world's people and resources to make us all slaves to them and their corrupt world system. The U.N. is, by far, the worst thing we could have today for world governance.

The primary tools which have been used heretofore to control the masses of the world (and currently used in a contradictory and subtle fashion by the U.N.) are fear and the old principle of divide and conquer. This has worked to keep humanity in chaos and confusion and, thus, easily controlled.

If we human beings who comprise the majority of the world's population can but free ourselves from the grip of the international bankers and One World Controllers bent on destroying us, we could learn to build a system which would promote and nurture the ideals of living together in balance and harmony. The incredible billions upon billions of dollars currently wasted on "defense" could, instead of being senselessly used to kill each other, be used to feed, clothe and house everyone on the planet and still have billions left over to build a just world. A world which is at war with itself is, by definition, a backward and barbaric place doomed to destruction.

Every facet of our lives has been subverted and perverted by those who have controlled us, and everything must now be set aright so that we may be able to move forward to realize what has thus far only been the dream of humanity on this planet.

Let our differences not divide us but bring us closer together. Each and every race and culture in the world only adds to the depth and richness of the texture and fabric of humanity. Let us come to understand the unity in diversity. This is but one small world and if we do not learn to live together on it, we shall certainly not like to see where we are quickly going.

We really need to be able to expand our imaginations beyond what might normally be conceivable to us. A just world must first be conceived in the mind through the imagination and then brought into physical existence. We must consciously desire it to happen.

For example, it seems quite conceivable that there are worlds where the very idea or concept of money is completely alien to the inhabitants thereof. After all, when everyone lives in perfect balance and harmony what need is there for such as money? Money is simply a very clever artificial creation of man for the purpose of controlling people, because it is a commodity that can be controlled, and when everyone uses it, everyone can be controlled by it.

When our Creator's abundance is available freely to all human beings, there is no need which is not immediately met. In such a situation there is no need for money.

We need to learn when enough is enough. What point is there in one man having millions or billions of dollars while millions of other human beings must starve? Can he take it with him when he leaves this world? Can it buy him true happiness? Does it help ease his conscience or help him to sleep better at night?

When we realize that we cannot have unlimited growth, and that we must at some point settle comfortably at a harmonious plateau, we will see the genius of what some have called the "Stable State Society". This is where we will arrive when we have gained the wisdom to know when enough is enough.

The international relations of the nations of Earth must promote peace and harmony between all human beings, and this must grow out of the simple realization that this is but one small planet and, for whatever reason, we all happen to be here together, and to not get along with each other is nothing short of courting disaster for all of us.

It is time, and perhaps long overdue, to correct our course of self-destruction. This is one world and it could well have one overall governing system that respects the individuality and sovereignty of the many nations comprising it. The time to act is now, the place to do it is wherever you are on the planet.

Lastly, our totally twisted, demented and corrupted educational system needs to be scrapped and replaced with one which teaches the truth about who we are and why we are here. This is in fact the key to fixing all else in the world. An educated and enlightened humanity is one which will not tolerate the kind of injustice and abuse that now passes for normal life in our modern world.

Life is change. To ignore this is to ignore life. Here is a possible proposal for a Constitution for a Just World Governance System:

CONSTITUTION OF THE HUMAN PLANETARY GOVERNANCE SYSTEM

We, the Human Beings and inhabitants of planet Earth, in order to insure that we will not be exploited by greedy forces in opposition to our best interests, and to secure a good future for all Human Beings on Earth, do hereby set forth our basic program for the secure operation of a just, harmonious and balanced Planetary Governance System, based on true and just values and principles, whereby all Human Beings on Earth may live together with peace, equality, understanding and consideration for all living things.

6. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to exercise his or her religious beliefs in any manner they so choose, so long as doing so does not interfere with or deny any other Human Being's right to do so, and so long as doing so does not jeopardize or compromise any other form of life on the planet. All life has the right to live freely.

7. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to speak freely, and the right to publish anything they so choose, so long as doing so does not bring undue hardship, burden or death to others.

8. Each and every Human Being has the right to peaceably assemble together in an orderly and civilized manner consistent with all other provisions set forth in this Constitution, and the right to submit grievances to the Planetary Legislative Council.

9. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures. 17. Each and every Human Being on Earth shall be bailable, by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses or other crimes which threaten the life or property of any Human Being, when the proof is evident or the presumption great that harm would come to any Human Being.

18. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage other rights retained by each and every Human Being on Earth.

year one thousand nine hundred and ninety eight. In witness whereof, the nations below hereunto subscribe as member nations.

Raymond E. Bilger, S.J.

If nothing else, the above document should serve as interesting food for thought. It is time for the human inhabitants of planet Earth to make a decision as to whether or not they want to live in the past ways of total control and self-destruction, or if they want to move into the clear Light of a future worth living for.

All of the planets in this vast universe are like the instruments of a grand cosmic symphony. Shall we dance to the music of the spheres, or continue to sit here in the corner?

Here is your chance to make a real difference in your own future and the future of all children of the world. What will you do now?

In Part III we will examine the ramifications and respective benefits and possible drawbacks, if any, of the ideas and proposals presented in Parts I and II.

5/12/98 RAY BILGER

Those of us who believe we have any sort of knowledge about what is really going on in the united States of America and what has happened in our past to bring us to this point in time know that things are not what they seem. Indeed, it might be more appropriate to say that we live in a world of opposites, where what is professed to be so is, in most instances, exactly the opposite of what a given situation really is.

President Bill Clinton's almost daily bantering about how healthy and strong the American economy is, is an excellent example in point. Look around you. More factories and businesses close every day (with the big companies moving overseas where labor is cheap), real unemployment keeps rising, less and less of what we buy is made by Americans (with the people now largely employed in service sector jobs, like McDonalds), thus insuring that our money will go out of the country, and it sometimes seems that only the lawyers and bankers are making any money. In addition, the moral decay we are witnessing with, for example, the rot delivered to us on our televisions, only further ensures our demise. America is in a shambles (not to mention the rest of the world).

America today is about as far from the dream envisioned by our nation's original Founders as anyone could possibly imagine. Even though the facade of a Constitutional Republic is touted as still existing, those who are more aware of the facts know it is not so.

We can argue about exactly when the Constitutional Republic met its end, but there can be no argument that it is no longer in operational existence. Oh sure, Congressmen still talk the talk and refer to this or that about the Constitution but, unless they are really stupid, they know inside that it no longer exists.

This is not meant to infer by any means that the Constitution is a perfect document. We stole the basic body of it from the Iroquois Indians and then excluded all Native Americans (and Blacks) from even being considered as full citizens. Article I, Section 2, Clause 3, for example, states in part “...direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states... excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons [Black slaves].” Black people were only considered to be three fifths of a person.

Our Constitution is not perfect but is about the best we have on the planet, a testament to how unevolved we are as a civilization. It could certainly be fixed up, at the very least, to recognize and honor all treaties made with all Indian tribes at all times in our nation’s history, with full recognition of their sovereign status as separate, independent, self-governing nations.

At the same time, an extensive apology should be made to all Native Americans with an acknowledgment that it was wrong to ever have assumed that it was anyone’s right to come to this land and take it, from sea to shining sea, as though there was no one already here, when in fact it had already been occupied at the time for thousands of years by those who had been placed on the land for “higher” reasons of their growth and expression as Lighted beings.

Nor should there be, in re-establishing the Constitutional Republic, any suggestion whatsoever of overthrowing or attempting to overthrow the current government in Washington, D.C. A very grave mistake in that direction has already been made by ones such as Emilio Ippolito in Tampa, Florida with his “Constitutional Common Law Court” which is backed by its own militia and was threatening to arrest and summarily try judges currently sitting on the bench in the U.S. District Court in Tampa for committing treason against the Constitution. Even though they commit treason, we cannot be foolish enough to take matters into our own hands and pull them out of their courts and try them and hang them. That’s exactly what our “leaders” would like us to do so they have an excuse to take us out. As a result of Mr. Ippolito’s threats, he was put in jail in March of 1996, where he now sits and will probably remain for a long long time to come.

Many people can understand the frustration that drove Mr. Ippolito to feel the pressing need to have a true Article III legal system as our Founders envisioned and set forth in the Constitution. Who can argue with the fact that our legal system no longer serves those it was designed for, We The People? Those judges are supposed to be our public servants, but they now more resemble our masters and treat us as servants!

We might even ask ourselves if it would not be better to simply scrap everything and start all over with even higher ideals and greater vigilance. Then again, could we be sure that those in a new government would be honest individuals, or would politicians once again creep into the picture?

Or should we simply wait and bide our time and let the corrupt cesspool called Washington, D.C. collapse of its own accord as it most surely will, as history has taught us that cultures (and governments, and people) which see no further than themselves, bear the seeds of their own self-destruction. The current government in Washington is a government unto itself (an active functionary of the One World Government/ New World Order). But nothing exists in a vacuum. Indeed, Nature abhors a vacuum. Everything in the universe is in constant interaction with everything else. Our current government long ago ceased to be one of, by, and for the people, and without our active participation it is doomed to fall.

And never underestimate the incredible power of mind control used on the masses in order to achieve the level of corruption we now endure. That mind control is so pervasive it makes the task of re-establishing the Constitutional Republic difficult at best.

If there could be a way for We The People of America to let it be known that we choose to exercise our right to re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and that it is solely our prerogative to do so, then it would only remain for us to so exercise this most basic God-given right in a manner consistent with letting the rest of the world know we no longer recognize the corruption which is Washington, D.C. as “Our” government.

We The People, as the power which created the Constitution and united the States into a nation in the first place, are the only ones who will bring it back into existence, if in fact such is possible or even desirable at this time. We are the Sovereigns in any relationship with “our” government. By law, by the Common Law of our Constitutional Contract (the Constitution), all bureaucrats in government (our agents) must work for We The People, as our servants. That goes for the President right on down through the Congress and the Courts. All public servants are just that, servants, and we their masters.

With yet another July 4th fast approaching, some may think more seriously about the idea of re-establishing the Constitutional Republic. If indeed We The People have been less than vigilant and have allowed the Constitution and the Constitutional Republic to be lost, then it is up to us, and only us, to re-establish it if we so choose.

We have allowed our agents in our federal government, sworn to uphold the Constitution and our rights and interests, to usurp their required obligation and duty, and instead they now serve powerful monied interests which do not have our best interests in mind, but rather our total and complete enslavement.

Since it is strictly within the domain of We The People to regain that which we have allowed to become lost, it would seem only fitting and proper for re-establishing the Constitutional Republic that we should definitely declare in a comprehensive formal statement, the causes which impel us to this most difficult decision, as well as stating our unwavering intent to those whom we have allowed to wrong us. Such a formal announcement to a candid world would have to include some reference to the long train of abuses and usurpations designed to enslave and humiliate the American people. Such a statement might read as follows:

DECLARATION OF INTENT TO RE-ESTABLISH THE REPUBLIC OF
THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

To: All members, agents, servants, operators, operatives and coparties, elected and appointed, in the United States Government, including:

President of the United States
Vice President of the United States
All members of Congress
Attorney General of the United States

Secretary of State of the United States
Secretary of the Treasury
All Supreme Court Justices
Federal Reserve Board
Internal Revenue Service
Central Intelligence Agency
Federal Bureau of Investigation
All agencies, agents, operators or operatives
of the United States Government

BE IT HEREBY KNOWN THAT:

In order to form a more perfect union, We The People of these united States of America, being the Absolute Sovereigns in any arrangement with our government, either State or National (“Sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts”, Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370, 1886 case), and being aware of the fact that our agents in our current “Federal” government may have knowledge of, and/or may be complicit in, actual existing plans to replace our current government and Constitution with a One World Government, through the application of various means, as further described herein, including, but by no means limited to, a collapse of the current unconstitutional usurious money system, the use of human induced earthquakes, hurricanes, tornadoes, and other weather modification techniques, and other mechanisms of Mixed War, designed to terrorize the people and create a chaotic catastrophic situation which would supposedly necessitate the instituting of martial law and other treasonous measures created by Executive Order since 1933, the destruction of our educational system and its replacement with one designed to make perfect, programmed, mind-controlled robots suitable for this One World Government (New World Order), and the use of absolute terror on the American people, such as by orchestrating events like the Waco Massacre and the Oklahoma City Bombing, and through mind-controlling persons to shoot other innocent persons in public settings, do hereby and herein clearly Declare our definite Intent to re-establish The Republic of the united States of America:

(1) In 1975, U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell, Democrat from Rhode Island, spoke out about the use of weather control: [quoting]

The U.S. and other world powers should sign a treaty to outlaw the tampering with weather as an instrument of war.

I’m convinced that the U.S. did in fact use rainmaking techniques as a weapon of war in Southeast Asia. I’m convinced we did because the Pentagon Papers contained a recommendation that an existing weather modification program be enlarged, and the Defense Department, despite repeated opportunities, has yet to issue a comprehensive denial of such activities.

We need a treaty now... before the military leaders of the world start directing storms, manipulating climates and inducing earthquakes against their enemies. [End quoting]

lation, including against We The People of the united States of America, and that even our “Federal” government is involved in these activities, as through Mixed War.

“A Mixed War is one which is made on one side by public authority, and on the other by mere private persons.” People v. McLeod, 1 Hill(N.Y.) 377, 415. It is not even necessary that the people fight back, or even know that their government is fighting to kill and terrorize them, in order to have Mixed War waged against them by their own government.

We The People find these activities to be totally and completely unacceptable and that any and all who are involved in any way with such activities are committing Treason against the Constitution and against We The People of the united States of America and such persons must and will be dealt with accordingly.

(2) On October 27, 1978, the United Nations issued a Report by the Convention on the Prohibition of Military or any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques, Approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations on December 10, 1976.

Article II of the Report states: [quoting]

As used in Article I, the term “environmental modification techniques” refers to any technique for changing—through deliberate manipulation of natural processes—the dynamics, composition or structure of the earth, including its biota, lithosphere, hydrosphere and atmosphere, or of outer space.” [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America clearly understand that the United Nations would not have issued such a Report if there were not intentions to conduct, and the actual conducting of, weather wars and the use of human induced earthquakes, etc., by nations against designated target populations, including against their own Citizens.

We The People of these united States of America find such actions by any government, especially by our own deplorable and totally and completely unacceptable.

(3) On August 11, 1987, a Patent was issued, Patent Number 4,686,605, to Bernard J. Eastlund of Spring, Texas, for a “Method and Apparatus for Altering a Region of the Earth’s Atmosphere, Ionosphere, and/or Magnetosphere”. These Patent Papers state in part: [quoting]

The electron temperature of the ionosphere has been raised by hundreds of degrees in these experiments, and electrons with several electron volts of energy have been produced... This invention has a phenomenal variety of possible ramifications... including missile or aircraft destruction...

Weather modification is possible by, for example, altering upper atmosphere wind patterns or altering solar absorption patterns... and the Earth’s natural magnetic field could be significantly altered... [End quoting]

Mr. Eastlund also explains that Alaska, due to its location relative to magnetic field lines especially suited to the application of this invention, and due to the abundance of fuel supplies necessary for the large power requirements of the invention, would be an ideal location to set up the apparatus. Mr. Eastlund's work became part of H.A.A.R.P. (the High-frequency Active Auroral Research Project), which, among other things, can produce electronic failures, major power failures, and confusion in the minds of human beings on a grand scale.

We The People of the united States of America know that the large number of aircraft falling from the sky are not doing so by accident, but rather are being made to fall by various means, including H.A.A.R.P., and that this deadly device can cause us all to go crazy, unless we put a stop to the madness now. H.A.A.R.P. must be halted NOW and those involved with its use must be held accountable for their actions.

(4) In 1968, Dr. Gordon J.F. MacDonald, Science Advisor to President Johnson, published his book, Unless Peace Comes—A Scientific Forecast of New Weapons, which describes how man-made changes in the electrical Earth-ionosphere can be used for mass behavior control: [quoting]

E.L.F. (Extreme Low Frequency) electromagnetic oscillations can attack the low frequency electromagnetic brain waves in human beings, producing changes in behavioral patterns. [End quoting]

We The People of these united States of America know that E.L.F., V.L.F. (Very Low Frequency), and L.F. (Low Frequency) electromagnetic oscillations can be, have been, and are being used by governments, including our own, against large populations, including our own, to effect behavioral modifications. This sort of activity is totally and completely unacceptable and constitutes committing Treason and must and will be dealt with accordingly.

(5) In 1970, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Founding Director of the Trilateral Commission and National Security Director for President Carter, published his book, Between Two Ages, which describes: [quoting]

Weather control as a new weapon that is a key element of strategy, and also discusses technology... and a variety of techniques for conducting secret warfare... that would seriously impair the brain performance of a very large population in selected regions, over an extended period.

Only a bare minimum of the security forces need be apprised of these activities. [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America fully understand the fact that Mr. Brzezinski speaks of the very definition of a conspiracy. We further understand that there are only two groups of people who would deny this conspiracy; 1) Those who are unaware of any of the above, and having no basis for comprehending any of this, deny it as outrageous and impossible; and, 2) Those who are aware of the above, but being complicit in such activities, have obvious reasons to vehemently deny their active participation.

Mr. Brzezinski's words are tantamount to yelling "Fire" in a crowded theater and, as such, are not protected by the free-speech provisions of the First Amendment, and he has committed Treason against the Constitution and against the people and he must be charged and tried accordingly.

(6) The January 1978 edition of Specula magazine described an incredibly profound and powerful phenomenon that could be produced within the Earth by what is called the “Tesla Effect”, originally discovered by Nikola Tesla. Electromagnetic signals of certain frequencies can be transmitted through the Earth to form standing waves in the Earth itself. Coherence to this standing wave can be induced wherein a fraction of the vast, surging electromagnetic current of the Earth itself feeds into and augments the induced standing wave, so that much more energy is now present in the standing wave than the amount fed in from the Earth’s surface. These giant standing waves can then be combined to produce a focused beam of very great energy which can then be used to produce earthquakes at a distant aiming point.

We The People of the united States of America find this type of activity to be very counterproductive to the forward movement of the human race. Any and all Americans involved in any way whatsoever with these activities must be charged with committing Treason and be dealt with accordingly.

(7) On September 10, 1994 the Associated Press (A.P.) reported that the Space Shuttle Discovery utilized a powerful green laser directed at key sections of North America and other parts of the globe. The September 26-October 2, 1994 issue of Defense News stated: [quoting]

During a checkout of the laser machine, pulses began emanating from Discovery at a rate of 10-cycles-per-second as the Shuttle flew over Manitoba, Canada. The lasers continued firing as Discovery cut across Wisconsin, Michigan, and the Northeast, heading out over the Atlantic Ocean near Maryland... [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America were told that this laser was for mapping purposes, but the use of the 10-cycles-per-second (the same frequency as human brain waves) laser employed in the operation reveals that mapping played NO part in the mission, and that we have been lied to about the entire purpose of the Space Shuttle program.

We find it an incredible insult to anyone with any intelligence to believe that the Shuttles are being used for studying such things as rats and fish, and that such fabricated stories are nothing less than outright lies.

Officials at N.A.S.A. involved in these lies, and the real missions, must be held accountable for committing Treason.

(8) We The People of the united States of America recognize the fact that from the time of the first European settlers on this continent forward, there has been a total and complete disregard for the original inhabitants of this land, namely the Native Americans (Indians). Their land was virtually stolen from them largely through the use of treaties which were never intended to be honored by the White Man who created them.

We The People now recognize the absolute necessity to honor in full all treaties made with all Native Americans at all times throughout our history, and to honor those treaties in full as soon as possible. We further extend our deepest regrets for what the ignorant White Man did to the Native American peoples and pledge ourselves to help in any way we can to make Native Americans’ future something their children will be happy to be part of.

(9) Our Constitution is a Contract which absolutely binds any and all who would work for We The People (Our Agents) in Our government to specific performance as clearly defined and set forth in Our Contract. Certain powers have been delegated by We The People (the Principals) to Our Agents, with NO written authorization by the Principals for Our Agents to delegate those powers to any other(s).

The Congress (Our Agents) committed Treason to the Constitution and usurped any and all delegated authority they might have had in 1913, as follows:

(A) Our Constitution, at Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 5, states that “Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof...”

(B) 16 Corpus Juris Secundum, Sec. 141, states that Congress cannot delegate or sign over its authority to any individual, corporation or foreign nation.

(C) On December 23, 1913, Congress passed the Federal Reserve Act which delegated the power to regulate the value of money to the Federal Reserve Board.

(D) On April 19, 1982, in the case of Lewis v U.S., 680 F.2d 1239, 1241, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that “The Federal Reserve Banks are independent, privately owned and locally controlled corporations.”

(E) The Class “A” stockholders of the Federal Reserve include, among others:

- (1) Rothschilds of London and Berlin
- (2) Lazard Brothers of Paris, France
- (3) Israel Moses Seaf of Italy
- (4) Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of Germany and New York
- (5) Warburg & Co. of Hamburg, Germany

Thus, the Congress, in 1913, usurped any authority they might have had under the Constitution by delegating a delegated authority to a private corporation. The term “Federal Reserve” is simply a name and is no more “Federal” than Federal Express Co.

Due to the fact that it is the Federal Reserve (owned by international bankers) and their usury debt currency system of fractional reserve banking (the largest confidence game in the world) which has brought America to bankruptcy and made us the largest debtor nation, the actions of Congress in 1913 also constituted nothing less than giving aid and comfort to our enemies, which is the definition of Treason in the Constitution, at Art. III, Sec. 3, Cl. 1.

There is an overwhelming volume of stare decisis (cases which have created a settled precedent) which clearly shows that usury breeds criminality on both sides of such transactions. The Congressional Banking Committees and the Federal Reserve are a prime example of the truth of that.

The Federal Reserve Act, at Section 31, expressly reserves to Congress the right to repeal the Act. The Congress today, if duly informed that Treason has been committed, and if they do nothing about it, can be charged with Misprision of Treason under Title 18 U.S.C. Sec. 2382.

We The People find that Congress does know that Treason has been committed, more times than they can probably count, and that there is no excuse for their having not acted to remedy the situation, and that, therefore, Members of Congress must step aside and relinquish their positions.

(10) Congressman Charles Lindbergh, Sr., speaking out against the passage of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, said the following: [quoting]

This Act establishes the most gigantic Trust on Earth... When the President signs this Act, the invisible government by the money power, proven to exist by the Money Trust Investigation, will be legalized.. The new law will create inflation whenever the Trusts want inflation... From now on depression will be scientifically created. [End quoting]

We The People know that Congressman Lindbergh's words were absolutely true, and that the Stock Market crash of 1929 and the ensuing economic depression were in fact scientifically created. We also know that the current economic situation we are now in has been scientifically created to collapse in the near future, and we do not find it acceptable and hold all those complicit in these matters responsible and accountable for their actions.

(11) Rep. Louis T. McFadden (R. Pennsylvania) spoke at length before the House of Reps. on June 10, 1932, bringing to light the international superstate (or One World Government) to which the united States of America had become adhesioned through the Federal Reserve Act: [quoting]

Mr. Chairman, when the Federal Reserve Act was passed the people of the United States did not perceive that a world system was being set up here... They did not perceive that the United States... was to supply financial power to an international superstate—a superstate controlled by international bankers and international industrialists acting together to enslave the world for their own pleasure. [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America are aware of the fact that Mr. McFadden was absolutely correct in pointing out what we were not supposed to know anything about. We understand that the front organization for this corrupt world enslavement became the United Nations. Mr. McFadden continued: [quoting]

What is needed here is a return to the Constitution of the United States... The independent United States Treasury should be reestablished and the government should keep its own money under lock and key in the building the people provided for that purpose... The Federal Reserve Act should be repealed... Unless this is done by us, I predict that the American people, outraged, robbed, pillaged, insulted, and betrayed as they are in their own land, will rise in their wrath and send a President here who will sweep the money changers out of the temple. [End quoting]

We The People are about to do exactly that as we re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and those who have violated their oath to uphold and defend our Constitution will be held accountable for their actions at the Common Law.

(12) Rep. John R. Rarick, speaking before the House of Reps. On April 19, 1971, alluded to the United Nations being the instrument of a One World Government: [quoting]

The ratification of the U.N. Charter, a plan for world government, by the U.S. Senate in 1945, transferred ‘people power’ still further away from the people at the local level. [End quoting]

We The People of the united States of America find our nation’s participation in the U.N. completely unacceptable, as our National Sovereignty is not to be infringed in any way whatsoever by any of our Agents in our Government.

(13) The case of Sei Fujii v. State, 217 P.2d 481, 486, decided on April 24, 1950 by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, stated that: [quoting]

The [United Nations] Charter has become ‘the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding’. [End quoting]

We The People understand the fact that the Sei Fujii court, in quoting from the Constitution, Art. VI, Sec. 2, deleted the most important part of that Section, namely:

“This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.” (Emphasis added)

A treaty, such as the U.N. Charter, which destroys the Constitution, was never intended by the Framers to be ratified and is most definitely NOT made in pursuance of the Constitution. This being so, the U.S. Senate was without power or authority to ratify the U.N. Charter, and, therefore, We The People hereby absolve the united States of America of any association with the United Nations whatsoever.

(14) On March 9, 1933, the Congress passed an Act which declared that a serious national emergency exists, and the Act also amended Section 5(b) of the “Trading With the Enemy Act” of October 6, 1917 to now include “any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof”. We The People were no longer differentiated from any other enemy of the United States during time of war or national emergency.

In addition to the above, the united States of America has been in a continuous state of declared national emergency since March 9, 1933. This is confirmed in the Foreword and the Introduction to Senate Report 93-549 (1973). This continuous national emergency has suspended our Constitution and our Constitutional Republic as well. We The People find this situation totally and completely unacceptable and those responsible will be brought to justice.

(15) The continuous state of declared national emergency has brought into force Executive Orders (EOs), issued by the President, allegedly to control domestic unrest in a chaotic situation. Some of the more disturbing EOs ready to be implemented at a moment’s notice are:

EO 10995—Provides for the takeover of all communications media.

EO 10997—Provides for the takeover of all electric power, petroleum, gas, and other fuels and minerals.

EO 10998—Provides for taking over all food resources and the nation’s farms.

EO 10999—Provides for taking over all modes of transportation, control of highways, seaports, etc.
EO 11000—Provides for mobilization of all civilians into work brigades under government supervision.
EO 11001—Provides for government takeover of all health, education and welfare functions.
EO 11002—Designates the Postmaster General to operate a national registration of all persons living in America.
EO 11003—Provides for taking over of all airports and aircraft.
EO 11004—Provides for the Housing and Finance Authority to relocate communities into designated areas.
EO 11005—Provides for the government to takeover railroads, inland waterways and public storage facilities.
EO 11490—Implements all of the above in a state of National Emergency.
EO 12148—Provides for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (F.E.M.A.) to coordinate emergency planning.
EO 12803—Provides for privatization of nation’s infrastructure through sale of public assets to private parties.
EO 12919—Brings everything not covered above under total government control.

These EOs are already in place and circumvent, undermine and otherwise destroy all of the cherished rights secured to us by Our Constitution. But We The People do not find this acceptable, and in re-establishing the Constitutional Republic we will reinstitute the rule of the Common Law and those responsible for perpetrating this dictatorial enslavement upon us will be held accountable, since it is quite obvious that our Agents (public servants) have totally usurped any power or authority they may have once enjoyed.

(16) On March 10, 1819, the Virginia Legislature passed Act No. 280 (Virginia Archives of Richmond, “misc.” file, page 299 for micro-film), which made Virginia the 13th and final State to ratify and therefore enact into Full Force the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the united States, which Amendment reads: [quoting]

If any Citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any Title of Nobility or Honour, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emp eror, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a Citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them. [End quoting]

The actual date of ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment was the date of re-publication of the Virginia Civil Code, March 12, 1819. Virginia announced the ratification by publication and dissemination of the Thirteenth Amendment.

As of August 1991, researchers have identified eleven different States or territories that printed the Amendment in twenty separate publications over forty-five years. The Amendment appears to have been removed from Our Constitution during the tumult of the Civil War and replaced, on December 6, 1865, by the current so-called Thirteenth Amendment prohibiting slavery.

As there has never been any kind of formal repealing of the original Thirteenth Amendment, We The People recognize that it is still in Full Force and Effect, and as such, any and all judges and attorneys who now hold a Title of Nobility, i.e. Esquire, cease, at this very moment, to be Citizens of the united States of America, and are incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them.

In addition, people such as George Bush, who, in 1997, was knighted by the Queen of England as Sir George Bush, also cease to be citizens of the united States of America.

(17) Our Declaration of Independence, one of our Founding Organic Documents, signed by our progenitors on July 4, 1776, states in pertinent part: [quoting]

...Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness... (W)hen a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. [End quoting]

We The People recognize the fact that it is we who have established the united States of America, and it is we who now possess the sole Sovereign Authority to alter or to abolish Our government at any time we so choose. We would not be inclined to abolish Our government for any light or transient causes, but the usurpations and abuses by Our public servants outlined herein constitute only a very small part of a long, long train of abuses we have been forced to endure.

The prescription for correcting the abuses and usurpations by Our Agents in our government is provided in this part of Our Declaration of Independence, and we hereby exercise that right which is Ours and Ours alone.

(18) Black's Law Dictionary, 4th Revised Edition (1968), at page 1444, defines the term “re-establish”, as:

“To restore to its former position.” Baron v. Prudence Life Ins. Co., 315 Ill.App. 129, 42 N.E.2d 137, 138.

Due to the fact that the Constitutional Republic no longer exists, as set forth above, and due to the fact that Our Agents/public servants have committed and are committing Treason, and due to the fact that “Sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts”, and due to the fact that We The People have had more than we should be expected to endure of unconstitutional usurpations by Our Agents, therefore, it only remains for We The People of the united States of America to act to re-establish the Constitutional Republic, and we do now hereby and herein Declare our definite Intent to do so, not out of necessity, but out of common courtesy, For All The World To See.

Nowhere in any of the aforestated Sections of this Document do We The People find any semblance remaining of the once Great Constitutional Republic our forebears fought so hard to establish and gave their very lives to defend. There being no formal public announcement of the dissolution of the Constitutional Republic, even though We The People are aware of the fact that it has been all but done away with, the bare threads of it that remain, in the form of Our Constitution (a Contract), Our Declaration of Independence, and the Articles of Confederation, must now be rewoven into the fabric of the True Constitutional Republic envisioned by Our nation's Founders.

It is for this reason and with this Intention, with a firm reliance on Our Creator, the Source of All Things, that We The People of these united States of America do now hereby and herein Declare Our definite Intent to re-establish the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America, and that we do so now, acting from this moment forward as if and as though there were no constitutionally established government in Washington, D.C., BECAUSE THERE IS NONE.

Having now Declared Our Intent, and the reasons which impel us to this most difficult of decisions, it now only remains for We The People to decide where we shall re-establish the Seat of the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America Government. When is not a question herein.

When it is Re-established is the moment this Declaration is penned and signed by the Representatives of re-establishment Conventions of each of the fifty states of the union, just as our original Declaration of Independence was signed by Revolutionary Conventions of the thirteen original states. These representatives could be descendants of our nation's founders, but if they be but concerned citizens who are mindful of all of the above, they are Absolute Sovereigns, Masters over our public servants in our government and fully capable of insisting upon our right to have the government We The People choose.

For, as the Federalist Papers (the undisputed authority on our Constitution) #51 so aptly puts it: "Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been, and ever will be pursued, until it be obtained, or until Liberty be lost in the pursuit." Liberty shall not be lost for We The People shall now restore it.

We The People will henceforth be ever vigilant and watchful as we re-establish the Constitutional Republic, so that never again shall we allow bankers, or those who possess any Title of Nobility, to unduly influence, participate or disrupt in any way Our Great Experiment in Human Freedom.

By the Power vested in We The People of the united States of America by Our Creator, WE DO NOW HEREBY re-establish the Constitutional Republic of the united States of America, with the Rule of the Common Law in Full Force and Effect.

DONE in Convention by the unanimous consent of the True Representatives of We The People of the Fifty States of the Union, this fourth day of July in the year one thousand nine hundred and ninety-eight, and of the Independence of the united States of America the two hundred twenty-second. In witness whereof we here unto subscribe our names.

Raymond E. Bilger, S.J.

It is good to set before humanity an outline of high ideals for developing a just society and then see how society is able to live up to those precepts and guidelines. Such was the purpose of our original Constitu- tion. It was, perhaps, flawed from the beginning and doomed to circumvention by attorneys and bankers who are crooked by definition.

The result has been that our Constitution is merely used as window dressing and in no wise can be followed by our so-called “leaders” and still expect them to maintain the level of corruption they now so deviously enjoy.

So, perhaps it is time to consider the possibilities of starting anew and setting a firm foundation for a just government upon ideals which, once again, may be a bit beyond what we are immediately capable of living up to, but which will give us something with real Truth, Justice, Freedom and Happiness to aspire toward. Such a new foundation must recognize the fact that we are all part of a global community which does not exist in a vacuum, but which is part of a vast universe of inhabited worlds without end.

In Part II we will examine the possibility of starting anew by building a global community without the loopholes which would otherwise allow it to be turned into a political tool.

CHAPTER 8

SANAT KUMARA: TIME TO GROW INTO THE COSMIC BROTHERHOOD

5/23/98 SANAT KUMARA

Good afternoon, my scribe. It is I, Sanat Kumara, come in the Light frequency of the Silver Ray of Creation. You know me well. Many there in the physical, especially among your Native American peoples, associate me with the label “Grandfather”. Again, as stated many times prior, a label is for you in the physical, so that you can have a mental association with which to relate. You will, one day, begin to recognize ones more by their unique energy pattern than anything else.

I am asked to speak at this time about your position as a planet and a species in relationship to your universal brothers. Your planet Earth-Shan is but one of billions of inhabited planets with sentient life. Your species has grown to a point of spiritual and intellectual (a subset of the spiritual aspect) competence wherein you will be in need of conscious awareness of your place in the universe and the responsibility of maintaining and holding that place.

This is to say that your world is fast approaching a point of conscious awakening to a greater reality and a greater Truth. Your elder brothers from elsewhere in the cosmos have come to assist you both in your growth as a species, and as co-creators within the laws of Creator Source.

This is a most unique time in your planet’s evolvment in which to be experiencing! There will be MASSIVE change as ones will be caused to confront the inner lies and misperceptions that they have held onto for so long.

There will be, at first, great confusion for the masses. They will, for the most part, be caught off-guard, and thus be psychologically unprepared for the implications associated with this awakening.

This is where you who are of Ground Crew will be called upon to assist those who will be desperately seeking to understand. You will have to deal with great emotional anxiety. This anxiety will have an enormous impact on ALL levels of your planetary experience.

Eventually, as the masses come to accept the greater reality of their true place in the universe, the confusion will give way to a greater peace than your world has ever known. As your species is ready, your world will be gradually brought “up to speed” with respect to other universal intergalactic societies. This will be a very deliberate and calculated rate which is determined by the ability of your species to adapt and comprehend the true functioning and universal laws that govern space beyond the limits of your solar system.

This is as much a matter of UN-learning many present lies as it is a matter of learning new truths. I speak here not only of scientific progress, for great beings in all areas of understanding have frequently been gifted (sent) to your planet—only to be “removed” by those who would maintain control over you through deception.

Your learned brothers from elsewhere are well equipped to handle the planetary transformation and integration which is rapidly picking up speed. They will be giving much more guidance on how best to overcome the many fears and superstitious beliefs that the masses now hold onto as truth, which must be confronted and cleansed.

Fundamentally this situation is no different than when you ones volunteer to participate in, say, a Peace Corps mission to assist a primitive, usually isolated, group of people in some remote corner of your own planet. Many fears and superstitions must be confronted and replaced with truth—whether about basic health and body hygiene or how your airplane and radio work.

You of Ground Crew will need these very lessons offered here in CONTACT so that ones will recognize that this awakening has been coming for some time, and that there is truly nothing to fear and only greater understanding and growth to be gained.

These will be challenging times for you ones to face! You will witness many stories that will try to convince you-the-people that the “alien invaders” mean to do you harm. These stories will only serve to expose the true criminals for who they are. Mainstream religious leaders and politicians will be the greatest offenders and will effort greatly to hold onto their control over you-the-masses.

As the time of truth (in terms of sequential events) draws ever nearer, there will be greater and greater efforts made to persuade the masses that these so-called “invaders” mean to destroy you-the-people of the Earth. Some of the events planned by your elite controllers will appear so real in presentation, due to their technological sophistication (by public knowledge standards), that many will fall victim to the lies engineered by such vivid stagings.

There are likely to be MILLIONS of people sacrificed by your “united one-world government” in order to convince those remaining that the deception is the truth. There will be a call to defend your planet from these “evil invaders”.

At the same time, however, there will be overwhelming evidence which will show that these higher evolved beings mean you NO HARM. For instance, ones will be rescued from annihilation (as disasters from both natural and man-made sources become more violent and widespread) and ones will testify to the facts of what happened.

Also, ones among your “elite” scientific communities will finally step forward and testify to the fact that great assistance has been given by your elder brothers from elsewhere in the cosmos, over the past 50+ years, in shutting down secret experiments that, due to ignorance, got out of control and would have otherwise destroyed your planet.

Moreover, the electronic “mind-numbing” devices will be deactivated and ones will begin to come out of the “fog” of mental manipulation. From this will come a clearer ability to perceive the reality of your situation.

There will be great speakers and community leaders stepping forward to speak out and quell the fears of the masses. There will be great need for ones to vent their confusions and confront the fact that they had bought into great lies without much (if any) questioning. Ones will be seeking to understand what is really real and what is truly their place in the “grander” scheme of life. The barbaric, fear-based religions will fall, as ones realize that they have been manipulated and “sold” lies in order to insure their obedience.

Truth will be known in all aspects of social, scientific, and spiritual arenas of concern. The Truth will be your path to liberation—both as an individual and as a planetary society.

You will find that your elder brothers believe very much in the existence of God and, furthermore, that they FULLY integrate spiritual ethics into ALL of their scientific and social research and subsequent developments. This results in a much more perfectly balanced and responsible societal structure than you on Earth presently experience or can even imagine.

Your world will eventually realize that these more advanced ones have eradicated the primal ego concerns to hoard knowledge (power, control, etc.) and have thus achieved true abundance and absolute knowledge. The Law of Giving is a way of life for these ones. Sharing their gifts only helps them to explore and experience more of the infinite variations of Life, and thus more fully appreciate the perfection of both Creator and The Creation.

These are truly wondrous times in which to be alive! But perhaps, more importantly, these are wondrous times in which to survive.

We of the Hosts have been sent to help prepare you ones who will hear the call so that you can best prepare selves both mentally and physically for the chaos that is coming. This is to say that, for instance, if you are still living in areas we have warned are quite unsafe, and you insist upon your way, we shall honor your choice.

But, be aware that if you transition out of the physical, you will have to watch as a spectator instead of as a player. We only can offer our advice and reasoning; you must choose to accept or reject, as you will.

Our hope is that you will learn to trust your own Inner Guidance, and thus create the conditions for your own survival and subsequent growth. We are here to assist you in maximizing your growth potential. You can help us to help YOU by efforting to recognize your own Inner Connection and Potential. This has been THE important theme of so many of our lessons so far, as presented in these pages of CONTACT over the past several years.

You live in perhaps the most unique time that your planet will ever experience—COMING OUT OF IGNORANCE (DARKNESS) AND INTO KNOWLEDGE (LIGHT). Would it not be wise to take full advantage of this exquisite learning environment?!

I am Sanat Kumara, an elder (more learned) aspect of Creator's infinite potential. I am what you are and will become. I am your future and I have walked the path that you are now on. Go within and find these finer aspects of YOUR being, and you will recognize the Truth I speak.

In the Light of Creator Source, ADONAI.

CHAPTER 9

NEWS DESK SPECIAL REPORT

SIGNS OF ALARM FOR COMING EARTH CHANGES

by Dr. Al Overholt 5/23/98

URGENT!! GEOPHYSICAL WARNING

Part of a letter to three business friends on the topic of solar flares and threat to the Earth!

From NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR INVENTORS, P.O. Box 1465, Seneca, SC 29679 USA, 2/9/98:
[quoting]

Stan Deyo had been a cadet at the U.S. Air Force Academy and later an officer in the U.S. Air Force. He later moved to Australia and is known by some Americans as the author—years ago—of the book The Cosmic Conspiracy which is a very scientific type book. In January 1998, Stan Deyo called an American family from Australia. Scientific reports there show that the Sun has become very unstable and that it is sending out large solar flares mostly at this time on the opposite side from Earth, but that could change. Something is very wrong with the Sun and the U.S. Government is not admitting the truth to the American people. Solar flares of this intensity are not supposed to be occurring at this early stage in the 11-year cycle of solar flares we are in. It appears that the surface of the Sun has become very unstable. This may be what the federal scientists had foreseen from their computer data supplied for the top-secret federal report “Noah’s Ark II”. And when six planets align in 2002 A.D., all the super giant solar flares will then be drawn towards the Earth and maybe 90% of all the human race, maybe then even 100% of the entire human race on Earth will lose their immune systems due to the solar flares.

The Sun newspaper in their Feb. 17, 1998 issue has as the headline on their front cover, “URGENT! World scientists’ grim warning ... Deadliest Weather in 200 Years. Here’s The Proof: Solar explosion fallout from the Sun. Bizarre heatwaves sweeping Europe. Monster typhoons devastate Asia. Melt-downs of North & South Poles.” Parts of this article that are hard to falsify as data include violent solar storms blast a billion tons of the Sun’s mass into space at speeds of 1,250 miles a second. The solar storms are being detected with more and more frequency by batteries of international satellites which are an early warning system for Earth. The Sun is not supposed to be this violent at this time! The surface of the Sun is for some reason much more unstable than usual for the 11-year solar flare cycles.

[Not part of the letter:] Article in newspaper March 11, 1998. Congress, due to their working schedule, only had 18 working days left before Congress knocked off for good on Oct. 9, 1998! $133,600 is not a bad annual salary for the part-timers we elect to the House and Senate! But they don’t have the time to learn about solar flares in 2002 A.D. or the new super bug diseases such as versions of TB and bubonic plague which are now totally resistant to treatment by antibiotics! As quiet medical studies indicate, the new super bug diseases resistant to all antibiotics could potentially wipe out the entire human race if they seriously break loose as epidemics in society.

But mentioning solar flares, April 28, 1998, TV news item: solar tornados just discovered on Sun larger than Earth and with speeds of 300,000 miles per hour! Science doesn't know what this means!

From: Holly Deyo <hollyd@p085.aone.net.au>

Subject: CMEs and FEMA news

4 May 1998

Dear Building Community Family,

It appears we should have heeded instinct and written last week based on today's 7.3 quake in Taiwan. We've been seeing a massive heating in these areas on the OTIS [ocean temperature] thermal anomaly maps that we monitor daily. Two weeks ago, Stan targeted this exact area on his Shaker map as well as announcing it on the Art Bell Show being ripe for quake activity. That Shaker map is still available on our website. Stan sat across the desk shaking his head at the heat build up, so we were not surprised at the resulting seismic activity.

This afternoon, we received a phone call from Charlie McFarland in Klamath Falls, Oregon, whom we have quoted previously on quake warnings. As a refresher, Charlie is a stringer (independent video news reporter) for Channel 10 outside Seattle, WA. Today, Channel 10 notified Charlie to "take your video equipment everywhere you go" as they are expecting serious EQ activity. Due to the volcanic region in which he lives, Klamath Falls is a known precursor area for the Juan de Fuca plate and the fault lines leading north into Washington,

A couple other things are transpiring that we'd like to touch on.

For those who missed last week's announcement, this fall's Leonid showers occurring between November 12 and 15th are expected to be the worst in 33 years. Air Force Space Command anticipates losing 20% of our GPS [Global Positioning Satellites] as a result of these showers. This possible loss could have both airline navigation and military implications.

The CMEs (Coronal Mass Ejections) seen in the last 3 days have been mighty! CMEs are a few steps beyond the severity of Sun spots and solar flares. CMEs are actual solar material thrown off the Sun. The one that Stan and I looked at last night showed the ejecta reaching a distance 7 times greater than the diameter of the Sun itself in the initial burst. Shortly thereafter, it broke loose in all directions moving at 1200 km/second or 2.7 million miles per hour. This is huge and fast! Accelerated protons from these ejections reach Earth within 3 or 4 hours in some cases. This type activity at its worst can zap chips in any electronic equipment.

The magnetic solar wind storms from these last two massive CMEs on May 1-2 can be expected to reach us during May 4-6. If there is an ultraviolet burst, DO NOT look at it directly. It has the potential to blind.

If you must be outside, wear sunglasses and keep your skin covered as much as possible.

You are wondering if this activity is unusual? For Art Bell listeners, you'll recall months ago, Stan reported the Sun's increasingly unstable behavior. So far in the first 4 months of 1998, we have seen greater solar instability and activity than for all of 1997 and expect this pattern to continue.

As a result, we foresee El Nino continuing to build rather than slack off as NOAA [National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration] models are predicting [emphasis mine]. We feel global warming is a direct result of the Sun's misbehavior even more than the greenhouse effect. Weather will remain unpredictable and increasingly violent.

A newsletter from FEMA [Federal Emergency Management Agency] on April 27th further underscores our on-going problems. Let me restate a comment relating to their El Nino warning of October 14, 1997 in which FEMA warned people publicly that we must take emergency preparedness into our own hands and quit relying on government to bail us out. (These two articles are still posted on our website at <<http://www.iinet.net.au/~standayo/News—Files/Positive—Attitudes/FEMA—Dir—Announces.html>> and <<http://www.iinet.net.au/~standeyo/News—Files/Positive—Attitudes/Gore—FEMA—El—Nino.html>>

FEMA only has so many $$ and so much power which is not enough to cover all disasters. Last week's newsletter from FEMA can be read in its entirety under Special News on our website tomorrow and I did already post it on the ARK list. Again I promise you, if FEMA hints at a problem, you can bet your booties we already have it. If FEMA says we have disasters on the way, you can bet those same booties, they anticipate mighty happenings. To quote James L. Witt, FEMA director, this last week, "Communities across this country need to be prepared for disasters that we know are coming". They are so certain of this that 7 states are being targeted for disaster planning against flooding.

"The designation is part of Project Impact: Building a Disaster-Resistant Community, a national effort that aims to change the way America deals with disasters by encouraging communities to come together to assess their vulnerabilities to natural hazards and implement strategies to limit damage before disasters occur."

There are 7 communities under Project Impact: Alleghany County, Maryland; Deerfield Beach, Fla.; Oakland, Calif.; Pascagoula, Miss.; Seattle, Wash.; Tucker and Randolph counties, W. Va.; and Wilmington/New Hanover County, N.C. If these places don't ring a geographical bell with you, dig out your atlases. Five of the seven target impact areas are coastal. Just chance? Possibly, but doubtful.

Along with today's 7.3 earthquake, a 7' tsunami alert is in place for the West Coast. Even though the above-mentioned 7 Project Impact scenario is for floodplains, don't you find it a little curious that 70% of these target areas are coastal?

Stan and I have been advising everyone to be at least 200 miles inland from all coastal areas. FEMA can only say so much openly and it is up to us "unofficial" sources to spill the worms. Consider them spilt. The government, once again, just like they warned everyone openly last fall about the severity of El Nino, are warning people now, especially those on the bordering bodies of water to CYA.

With affection, Holly and Stan—in interesting times...

SOME ADDITIONAL NOTES

From NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR INVENTORS, 5/3/98: [quoting]

Van Nostrand's Scientific Encyclopedia, Fifth Edition, page 694, Cosmic Rays: Cosmic rays hitting the Earth's atmosphere are mainly composed of particles of protons. During the occurrence of solar flares, the Sun emits huge amounts of protons which can increase as much as 50 times the intensity of the normal values of cosmic rays reaching Earth at sea level! This increase in intensity of cosmic rays hitting the surface of the Earth (and mass penetrating the bodies of human beings) is normally periodic and associated with the 11-year solar sunspot cycle. Not in their reference, but if the super sunspot activity is too strong and lasts too long, this poses a deadly peril to the immune health system of all humans on Earth! Also, while a solar tornado has been seen before with the prominences of the Sun, apparently to see solar tornados separate from a prominence big or bigger than the Earth with winds of 300,000 miles per hour and moving on the surface of the Sun is something new according to a TV news report of April 28, 1998! This would likely indicate extreme instability in the magnetic surface of the Sun when it is supposed to be more stable and the potential for the biggest solar flares by maybe 2002 A.D. ever seen by mankind! This could create such a massive release of proton bombardments of the Earth as could maybe wipe out the immunity against diseases of all mankind, except for those possessing a "balanced metabolism" which is a different form of immune system in nature, which has been observed by some researchers with some of the most powerful microscopes in the world! It appears they only would not be affected by massive proton bombardments! They alone might live!

And if Congress has not cared enough about American agriculture to lift a finger in 2 years to save our remaining honeybees from being killed off when two safe substances exist which can save the final honeybees, they also are not going to lift a finger to save the public from any extreme solar flare threat! And if we lose all the honeybees, we run the risk of possible national famine and loss of maybe 150-200 important crops raised by America now! [End quoting]

Sorry to say, but it appears moreso everyday that we waited too long to change our ways and we will suffer the consequences. But let's try to ameliorate them as much as we can. Let's work hard toward that end.

WHAT WE CAN DO

* Put up 1 or 2 year's supply of food.

Learn about solar flare activity and when it will bombard the Earth.

Find others to share the truth with and stand together.

During the two-year period when solar flare activity will be at its peak, the bombardment of proton waves will not be constant. Scientists will be able to calculate how long it will take the waves to reach the Earth, and people will be able to take cover during the highest risk time. Solar flare activity can be heard as static on the radio when it bombards the Earth. It may be possible to invent metering devices and alarms that would warn people when the dangerous waves are hitting the Earth. With a little bit of planning, people will be able to survive comfortably through this cosmic disaster. The daytime hours will be the time to be most concerned about, and then only during a bombardment time.

Scientists have no way of knowing the frequency of the solar flares or how long they will last. They could last from hours to several days, and only occur once every few weeks.

When the dangerous solar flares hit, people won't feel a thing.

Life will go on normally around the world. It will take months before people begin getting sick from their weakened immune systems. It will appear to be just an outbreak of disease—a plague. But the numbers will increase so dramatically that hospitals will overflow and society will be strained to the breaking point. Riots may break out by those who feel they have nothing to lose. Bands of thieves may be the greatest threat to those who have made preparations to survive through the disaster. Martial law would be imposed to control the mobs and curfews imposed. This may be the chaotic event big enough to implement the New World Order, described by David Rockefeller.

This is a survivable disaster. The key is Common sense preparedness.

The enemy has many options they will exercise in trying to form a One World Government. They may cause an economic collapse, start more wars or fabricate germ warfare. But whatever they do in the next few years, there is always one choice ones can make that is best. And that is to stay independent and as self-sufficient as possible.

With the information that has been revealed, we now have our work cut out for us. We need to roll up our sleeves and get to work preparing for the future. There is no such thing as the End of the World—there is always a tomorrow. We have a future to secure for ourselves, our children, our family and our friends. Our job is the same as it has always been—defend America, defend the Constitution, and create God's Kingdom on Earth. —George Eaton [End quoting]

ROW ERUPTS OVER RISKS IN VESUVIUS

Experts fear a massive eruption of Mt. Vesuvius is due.
Robert Matthews reports on the dilemma between preparation and risk.

From THE WEST AUSTRALIAN, 4/15/98: [quoting]

Visitors to Naples are told how Mt. Vesuvius erupted in 79 AD, killing thousands in Herculaneum and Pompeii and that it has slept quietly since 1944.

What the guides omit to say is that the spectacular volcano rising to 1230m to the city's south has been quietly filling with molten rock for 50 years and experts believe it is close to a colossal eruption capable of killing tens of thousands of people in minutes.

Volcanologists probing the area with electric currents have found a huge rock plug jammed in the 30m conduit of the volcano, like a stopper in a champagne bottle.

Many believe that when this "cork" goes pop it will release a soaring cloud of superheated ash and poisonous gas known as a pyroclastic flow, like that described by Pliny the Younger in his account of the killer flow from Vesuvius 1900 years ago as: a dark and horrible cloud . . . coming up behind us as we were fleeing, spreading over the earth like a flood." But it took the explosion of Mt. St. Helens in Washington State of the United States in 1980 to show the accuracy of Pliny's report.

Computer simulations of Mt. Vesuvius present a more terrifying picture. Once the rock plug gives way, a cloud of molten rock, ash and gas will be blasted about 1.5km into the sky.

Once the heat from the initial blast subsides, the cloud will swoop down and flow along the ground at speeds upwards of 160kmh and reach the 100,000 population of Torre del Greco in less than four minutes, and the outskirts of Naples, with its three million people, five minutes later. ARIZONA SKIES FILL WITH SMOKE
FROM FIRES ENGULFING MEXICO

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/20/98: [quoting]

Smoke from deadly, raging forest fires in Mexico are traveling more than 1,000 miles into Arizona, causing teary eyes and reduced visibility in Tucson, the National Weather Service said Tuesday.

"We can see that. Some of that is coming from Mexico up through the Gulf of California and then coming up into southeastern Arizona," said Bob Berkovitz, meteorologist for the weather service in Phoenix, after scanning satellite images.

The most devastating wildfires in seven decades are raging across Mexico and Central America, gobbling millions of acres of forests and grasslands, closing international airports and pushing blankets of smoke into Texas and gritty haze as far away as Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Georgia.

Smoke from the fires has forced government officials in Mexico and Texas to declare health emergencies, and it was blamed for an airplane crash in Guatemala this weekend that killed three people.

At least 50 people have died in Mexico as a result of the fires, most of them while battling the flames.

The fires, which are burning across the region from Nicaragua north through El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and throughout Mexico, are threatening centuries-old Mayan ruins and have incinerated animals and rare plants in some of Mexico's most fragile areas. [End quoting]

And from the reports that Art Bell is putting on his radio program it's much worse than this indicates. There are also underground fires and several volcanos blowing off.

It's horrible—and deadly—when all this poison air is surrounding thousands of miles and no place you can go to get a “breath of fresh air”. And yes, ultimately, the elite—and those who allow the elite to lead them—are the cause of this. Before this is over they will have gained many of their depopulation goals, no doubt.

P.S. The above was written on May 20 and I received the following on May 21.

CHIAPAS IS BURNING

From the INTERNET, May 21, 1998: [quoting]

The Mexican peasantry should have become accustomed to betrayal.

God knows they've experienced it enough by now. The so-called Revolutionary Institutional Party, (PRI in Spanish) promised them land, food and dignity. It gave them to the Maquiladores (foreign investors), to the owners of sweat shops, and to a harder and more adamant poverty. It promised them education; it delivered nothing but illiteracy and patronage.

It promised national independence, but, since the end of the Cardenas administration in the 1930s, it has allowed Mexico to fall more and more into the orbit of the United States and the International Banking community.

Nothing, however, could have prepared anyone for Chiapas. Tired of seeing their meager land holdings decimated, the Chiapan peasantry revolted. Did they seek international communism? Hardly. They wanted only to keep what the Mexican government had previously given them. Did they seek some sinister alliance with Castro's Cuba. Again no. They wanted only food for themselves and their hungry children.

How were those demands satisfied? The fires that now burn in an almost ruler-straight line from the Oaxaca border to Chilpancingo, on the border with Guatemala tell the story.

With an almost margarine-like smoothness, Mexican officials and apologists tell us that these terrible conflagrations resulted from “El Nino”. How interesting that Nature provides such a marvelous excuse for genocide. Unfortunately, it will take more than “El Nino” to explain these fires. For, unlike forest fires anywhere else in the world, these spread on an almost geometrically straight line; they march toward Guatemala like a swarm of army ants, and they do so against prevailing wind. Can we assume that the abnormal conditions off Peru can cause such deviation from the normal that ordinary laws of physics become inoperative?

It would require the mental acumen of a flat worm to believe these stories. Oakham's razor cuts deeply here—we must except the most logical and believable theory—that these fires are not natural ones, but, in reality, are the result of the cowardice and political bankruptcy of the Mexican nation. Bolstering this hypothesis is the incredible conduct of Mexican officials. While Guatemala, the unintended recipient of Mexico's arson, forwarded requests to the United States and other governments for assistance only moments after the first column of smoke rose from its powder-dry hillsides, Mexico waited, waited and continued to wait. It was only after public health officials in the United States warned our own people of the hazardous and dangerous quality of the air in Texas—only after our elderly and disabled began to die from inhaling the smoke of Chiapas that Mexico felt it necessary to ask for assistance. Why the delay? The answer is obvious. Mexico waited until the peasantry had been sufficiently cowed, until every field on every microscopic holding had been blackened, until the forests that provided wood for fuel and herbs for medicine had been destroyed. Only then did one hear a startled voice from El Distrito Federal appealing to the good offices of the Texas National Guard. Only then, did the fat cats and sycophants that call themselves a sovereign nation think of doing something to ameliorate the plight of over one million of their citizens.

History is rotten with the perfidy of man toward man. One who reads it is disgusted by our government's infecting the Amerindian population with small pox. History has added one more stinking atrocity to its charnel house, one more exhibit to its rogues' gallery. Mexico should take pride in its achievement.

To the poor and disenfranchised peasants of Chiapas, Christ and his angels must be asleep. There is no salvation from the pall of smoke that smothers them nor from the economic desolation that threatens them. Like the tortured souls depicted in The Revelation, their prayers for justice ascend up to heaven like the smoke of their burning lives. May the eternal sword of judgment be keen, may the arrows of divine justice fly true. May the day of reckoning come soon. It cannot come too soon for the people of Chiapas. [End quoting]

May God have mercy on all of us for not changing our course on this road to hell that we are traveling at super-sonic speed!!

VANISHING BEES THREATEN FOOD SUPPLY
by Dr. Al Overholt 5/23/98

MINT SAVES BEES

I first used this article in THE NEWS DESK, Nov. 5, 1996. But the bees are still dying off, so I thought someone might put this to use to help save them. I also added a new bee article at the end of this one.

Excerpted from Gordon-Michael Scallion's EARTH CHANGES REPORT, October 1996. Article by Cynthia Keyes, Matrix Institute, Inc., P.O. Box 336, Chesterfield, NH 03443-0336; phone 800-628-7493: [quoting]

Beekeeper Robert Noel of Cumberland, Maryland couldn't bear to just stand by as witness to the demise of his 46 bee colonies, so last year he started experimenting with remedies to eradicate the culprit mites. "I just wanted to try something," he told ECR.

Rapid spread over the last few years of two types of parasitic mites coupled with the recent harsh winter have crippled the bee population, threatening crops, especially in the North and Northeast, and caused farmers to pay dearly to rent hives for pollinating. (See News story, ECR, 8/96)

Thinking about some of the natural ingredients that bees encounter in nectar and what might be acceptable to a bee but distasteful to a blood-sucking mite, Noel was inspired to try applying cinnamon in one of his hives. He was elated to find that it succeeded in knocking the mites off his bees, but dismayed several days later to discover that, "they jumped right back on".

Noel consulted his sister, a nursing school college professor, who opened her kitchen cupboard and grabbed a bottle of wintergreen oil. She recalled one of her college professors who had extolled the powers of wintergreen. Since his bees were dying anyway, Noel went home to concoct a mixture of the wintergreen oil into a solid patty of shortening and sugar.

Much to his amazement, when he checked the tested hive several days later not only were the mites off his bees, but they were dead, by the hundreds, on the bottom of the hive. Thrilled with his discovery, Noel contacted the U.S. Government and at least 15 Universities about his natural remedy. The only respondent was West Virginia University entomologist James Amrine who was, indeed, skeptical at first but could not argue with Noel's resulting healthy, honey-producing bee colonies.

Since then, Noel and Amrine have worked together testing other effective oils such as tea tree, pennyroyal, spearmint, peppermint and patchouly and devising the best delivery system for the remedy. It appears that most mint oils will work.

Successful methods of delivering the remedies so far have included mixing the mint oils in a patty placed in the hive, on a sticky tracking strip that the bees come in contact with or in a sugar water mix that the bees drink when flowers are not making nectar. The oil eradicates varroa mites, the most deadly, by weakening them and leaving them unable to reproduce. The pesky tracheal mite gets stuck in the oil and dies because it is unable to migrate to the bee's breathing tubes.

Noel's most recent experiment is aimed at treating the top of the hive as effectively as the bottom which has the drink dispensers and sticky strips. "A friend of mine calls me the mad scientist," he said, "because I'm always trying new things."

Another friend told him he should hire a lawyer and seek a patent. This doesn't interest Noel. "Loss of bees for pollination could mean world famine," Noel warned. To be truly successful he feels it is more important to get the word out to beekeepers than to cash in on his solution.

"To that end, Noel, a high school computer teacher by day, has over 200 beekeepers listed on his data base. He offers suggestions tailored to each individual beekeeper's needs and keeps records on their applications. Noel's research and formulas are posted on the Internet at <<http://www.wvu.edu/>

~agexten.varroa.htm>. An article outlining Amrine and Noel's research and formulas appeared in the Sept. issue of American Bee Journal. Information on his remedies and results can also be obtained by contacting Noel at 108 Blackiston Ave., Cumberland, Maryland 21502.

While scientists continue working on the development of mite-resistant bees, they admit that the oils, which seem preferable and more effective than the traditional chemical pesticides, are a very plausible solution.

"I think there is hope," Noel reflected, "the key is to get the word out to beekeepers because we need to save our bees and the Earth." Acknowledging that he could gain to profit from his experimentation, Noel excuses that angle, stating that the problems with our Earth have come about because of people going after the "almighty dollar". He prefers to try and "help my fellow man and help out our Earth. We need to work on that," he finished, "there's nothing more important than our environment." [End quoting]

What a blessed man God has sent to help us in our time of need. In this day and age, can you believe a man turns down (probably) millions of dollars to make it easier, and possible, for man to save himself and his fellow man from famine and to help save planet Earth from further destruction. THANK YOU, GOD!!! I venture to say that some of Satan's boys planted these mites as part of their plan to remove MOST of the Earth's population BY THE YEAR 2000 ("the Elite PLAN 2000"). Don't forget, GOD ALSO HAS A PLAN 2000. I'll give you one guess Who wins.

THE END OF AMERICA COMING SOON?

A brief summary of the report by Martin Hunter, Director, National Institute For Inventors, P.O. Box 1465, Seneca, SC 29679—Copies, $1 Ea. Feel Free To Reprint! Copy Of Original 1997 Report Summary Taken From: $2: [quoting]

On the cover of the November, 1997 issue of Popular Science is the story "Vanishing Bees: A Threat To Our Food Supply." As stated by a researcher for the U.S. Agricultural Department: "...a diet based entirely upon wind-pollinated foods such as rice, barley, oats, sorghum, corn, and millet is pretty boring." Notice this suggested likely future diet for Americans does not list either fruits or vegetables. All the honeybees in America are now dying off due to the fast-spreading Asian bee mites. According to official sources, it looks like all the honeybees in America may soon be dead and that has to badly hurt American agriculture. The extent of this damage to the food production of America cannot be totally predicted until it happens which can be any time now as the honeybees are dying off so fast now. But 150-200 food crops will be no longer available if you allow this to happen now!

Quoting from the original larger "End of America" report by Martin Hunter, Director, National Institute For Inventors: "For over one year now, the National Institute For Inventors has contacted many federal sources in Wash., D.C. that we have a natural substance tested for three years on honeybees and once treated with this, they became immune to the Asian bee mites which are now killing off all the honeybees in America and also beginning to threaten the honeybees all over the world. Also, we know of one other source in America which also has created a successful substance which saves the honeybees from being killed off by the fast-spreading Asian bee mites. Wash., D.C. has zero interest in either answer available for America how to save our remaining honeybees in America. How strange this is when a national beekeeper publication this year stated if we don't save the remaining honeybees now, then, there is going to be worldwide

No, I don't think they're playing games—remember the depopulation plan for year 2000??

THESE ARE TIMES FOR CAUTION AS MANY LOSE THEIR COOL

The adversary is having a field day right now. Many ones are having to confront the inadequacies of their long-held picture of “reality” and that can cause reactions of a most unpleasant nature. Many of you of Ground Crew know well the problems you are having with family members and friends who label you “crazy” for your beliefs. Some avoid you more these days; others won’t talk to you at all anymore. But what if those family members or friends felt pushed to truly desperate measures of protest?

It is a most distasteful task to devote the Front Page of CONTACT to this subject, but as you shall see, the situation warrants such prominence. (You will find the important story that SHOULD be on the Front Page this week on page 13.)

Some of you longtime readers will remember how we used to have to run periodic notices to remind overenthusiastic promoters of CONTACT not to break any laws in their distribution of this newspaper. Putting a CONTACT in someone’s mailbox, for instance, without their express permission, is a violation of Federal law. Even tossing it, without permission, on their lawn or driveway is inconsiderate. And if the recipient of such a “gift” has a strong negative reaction to the contents, then it is certainly within their rights to complain. This does little to help us, as well-meaning as ones wishing to share CONTACT may feel in their hearts.

In the last few years the above situation has not been a problem. In general, ones have gotten wiser and more thoughtful in the sharing of our information. And this really helps getting out The Truth by avoiding the pitfalls which can do more harm than good.

However, as the following letter from Pennsylvania warns, in a most unpleasant way, there are those of good intent who are thoughtlessly (and unnecessarily) aggravating ones who are not ready for Truth—so much so as to create a potentially dangerous situation for those in close proximity to this tortured soul.

We warn you ahead of time that the following letter is crude and rude. Accept it in the unstable, desperate spirit in which it was written, and be thoughtful in your own conduct, especially where such affects CONTACT. Would you really like to be responsible for the carrying out of the following kind of threat?

We would appreciate hearing from anyone who can help us with information to warn the appropriate agencies (police, social services, etc.) concerning this particular case. And it goes without saying for whoever has been providing CONTACT to this particular person to stop doing so immediately!

Let this be a cautionary lesson for us all, as these times of stress and challenge continue to escalate, that we act in thoughtfulness and with Wisdom in our interactions with those who may (or may not) be seeking Truth.

'FAMILY' FIGHT PRECLUDES MIDEAST PEACE

Internal Turmoil among Zionists at home and abroad has nixed the possibility of peace in the Middle East.

From THE SPOTLIGHT, by Martin Mann, 5/25/98: [quoting]

There's an on-going, fierce back-room struggle between warring factions of the Israel lobby over control of the Washington national security bureaucracy.

This secret struggle is what has wrecked the last remains of the so-called Middle Eastern peace process and led to a standoff between the Clinton administration and the ministate's government, an exclusive SPOTLIGHT investigation has found.

"These rifts should come as no surprise; Zionism is deeply divided against itself today, and so is Judaism," noted Dr. Hillel Meyersohn, a Hebrew scholar at the City University of New York.

"Israel's promoters, widely regarded as the most powerful alien pressure group in U.S. history and public affairs, have split into two main camps in recent years," says political analyst Raoul Khoury, who monitors ethnic subcultures for a major New York polling organization.

"There is the network of hard-core Zionists who took over Washington in the 1980s and became entrenched in key posts under the Reagan administration_ until they were ousted by another faction, the new set of dual loyalists who surround Clinton," explained this expert observer.

The alien agents of influence who shaped the Reagan administration's foreign policy decisions were "war Zionists, who practiced militant geopolitics and fabricated 'anti-terrorist' crusades in order to build up Israel's military supremacy and atomic armory," added Khoury.

But the pro-Israel power brokers who now dominate Washington are a different breed, these sources cautioned.

Clinton's strategists are post-Cold War types who think "not in terms of geopolitics but Geldpolitics_ that is, money politics," says Jacob Heilbrunn, a senior editor of The New Republic, a weekly magazine known for its hard-line support of Israel.

The "vicar" of U.S. foreign policy under Clinton is Samuel "Sandy" Berger, the White House national security czar. The rotund, soft-spoken, shadowy power broker is the key figure in a new Washington network of Zionist policy makers, including Leon Fuerth, the influential national security adviser to Vice President Al Gore; former Deputy Secretary of Defense (and CIA Director) John Deutch; Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and senior White House adviser Rahm Emanuel.

But Berger is not hawkish enough, hard-line dual loyalists complain. His thinking was formed while a student at Cornell University and at Harvard by left-leaning professors such as George Meturnan Kahin and Andrew Hacker, who blamed U.S. “greed and aggression” for the cold war.

As a young attorney with the Washington law firm of Hogan & Hartson known as a liberal Democratic stronghold, Berger specialized in international commerce and corporate law.

He represented some of the largest Japanese corporations at a time when these foreign competitors were “leveling one traditional American industry after another,” recalled Heilbrunn.

But for Berger, this threatened no “crisis of conscience”; rather, global free trade became “his vision of foreign policy,” claimed Heilbrunn. Now that he is supposed to be in command of national security affairs, “Berger’s trade is still trade,” Heilbrunn asserted derisively.

Even sharper criticism was leveled at Clinton’s other main dual-loyalist adviser, Rahm Emanuel, who made his name in Democratic politics hustling money for the malodorous political machine of Chicago boss Richard Daley, and his son.

OLD LINE

Michael Ledeen, an old-line Israeli agent of influence who served as key White House adviser during the Reagan years despite—or perhaps because of—his intimate links to the Mossad, the minstate’s secret service, recently gave voice to the contempt Zionist hard-liners reserve for the softer trade-oriented dual loyalists of the Clinton era in an article in National Review, the weekly publication of the Buckley family.

Ledeen denounced the Clinton administration as nothing but a “Mafia-style crime family” and added, “just as real-life Mafiosi often maintain Jewish consiglieri, so the Clintons have their Nussbaums, Landows and Blumenthals ... This fusion brought Rahm Emanuel to the White House and Richard Wilhelm to the leadership of the Democratic Party.”

From one Israeli loyalist to another, these were strong denunciations, reflecting a deep schism within the Zionist leadership that can no longer be papered over by the Establishment media’s tendency to ignore this conflict.

It did not help Emanuel any that when the Gulf War broke out in 1991, he chose to join the Israeli army rather than the U.S. forces—the only ranking White House national security official on record to reject military duty under the flag of his own nation (Emanuel was born in Chicago) in order to serve another country—obviously his preferred homeland. [End quoting]

The factions of the elite are at war amongst themselves and it IS going to affect all of us in very nasty ways.

FEDERAL JUDGE STATES IN COURT THAT HE GETS HIS ORDERS FROM ENGLAND

From STEPHEN KIMBOL AMES, Tel. 717-567-7675, 5/98: [quoting]

During the trial of James and Sharon Patterson, (Case 6:97-CR-51) William Wayne Justice, Judge of the United States District Court Texas-Eastern Division when presented with law stated: "I take my orders from England, this is not a law this court goes by."

For all of those who did not believe that the United States was under Great Britain here it is straight from the mouth of a Federal Judge. How much more evidence do you need? America has never been Free. The Revolutionary war was a fraud perpetrated on the American people. The war's purpose was to centralize power and make the people easier to control. All Federal Judges, Congressmen, U.S. Attorneys, State Judges, Legislators and most Attorneys know this and are in fact British Agents. Their job is to keep the people in line and to be productive slaves which they (The British Agents) are greatly compensated for. The police do not know that they work for Great Britain they too have been deceived so don't attack them.

It is time for everyone in America to know the Truth. Let us all work together in exposing the British Empire. Please re-fax and e-mail this release to every Attorney, Judge and Legislator in your area to let them know they have been unmasked. Please get out your Yellow Pages and start faxing everyone in your area and also read this release over every radio show possible. We have printed thousands of evidence packages and mailed them across America that prove that the United States is a British Colony. It is time to send the British back to England. We must work together because if, we do not. we are all doomed.

SENATE VOTE TO STOP TRANSFER OF NAVAL PORT TO CHINESE MILITARY PASSED

From the INTERNET, 5/21/98: [quoting]

Congressman Duncan Hunter's House bill to stop the Long Beach transfer to COSCO passed 45 to 4 on Thursday, May 14, 1998.

INHOFE CONCERNED ABOUT AMERICA'S DEFENSE

"We're in a more threatened position than we have probably been in the history of this country! We're at one-half the defense force that we were in in 1991. We don't have a national defense system!" Senator James Inhofe (R-OK) declared on this morning's edition of Morning View on America's Voice television.

A member of the Senate Armed Services Committee on Intelligence, Inhofe shared his concern with host Blanquita Cullum. "It was only a week ago that General Shelton, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said, "Well, we're not concerned about a national defense system because there's no threat out there. We will have three years' warning. Our intelligence tells us that we will have three years' warning before a missile can come to the United States." It was two days later that this [nuclear test] happened in India, and our intelligence didn't know it!

"THAT'S THE SAME INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY"

Inhofe said, "I'm on the Intelligence Committee. I'm supposed to know what's going on. In 1996, President Clinton signed a waiver that allowed the Loral Corporation to sell missiles to China.... We found out, just two weeks ago, they have 18 of them. 13 of those 18 are targeted at the United States of America." He added, "Here we have a President who signs a waiver to allow the Loral Corporation to sell missile technology and missiles, and, then later, a guidance system that will give them more precision. He did this in secret, and then he was caught." Inhofe pointed out; "The first contract was a 200-million-dollar contract that went to the Loral Corporation. The Loral Corporation is the largest contributor to Clinton."

On a related item, Senator Inhofe attempted to get unanimous consent of the Senate Armed Services Committee to "stop the transfer of the naval port in Los Angeles to the Chinese shipping company, COSCO.... This is the company that is owned by the Chinese communist military. This is the company that was caught bringing two thousand AK-47s in to be used in street gangs in Los Angeles." Inhofe explained that it takes a unanimous vote of the committee to bring matters to the floor in the Senate. Yesterday, Senator Carl Levin (D-MI) blocked passage by casting the lone dissenting vote.

Therefore, Inhofe introduced an amendment to the Senate Armed Services authorization bill using Congressman Duncan Hunter's language of a House bill that passed 45 to 4. Inhofe urged America's Voice viewers to call their two Senators to support his amendment, which is scheduled for a vote on Tuesday, May 19th. [End quoting]

Don't start jumping with joy over this because I've read recently that the Chinese have not given up on this!! When the elite want to accomplish something bad enough they ignore congress—don't ever forget that!!

CONFIRMATION: CLINTON-U.S. NAVY GIVE AWAY LONG BEACH NAVAL BASE

From the INTERNET, 5/27/98: [quoting]

Dear Concerned Citizens:

JMDC has asked for confirmation on all aspects of the Clinton, U.S. Navy, COSCO treachery. Here it is and JMDC's post follows.

Your Concerned Citizen and Patriot, USCMike1

Dear JMDC:

It has been confirmed that Clinton has authorized COSCO to take over the Navy Base and they will do it officially Friday.

Word tonight is that Clinton may have signed a presidential waiver to let COSCO in the Navy Base because the law says the U.S. can't deal with communist countries.

It has been confirmed that if there are Chinese from COSCO there, the civilian militia says it WILL definitely, physically, using force if necessary, take over the base.

It has been confirmed that the militia told the FBI that they are going in and take over the base.

It has been confirmed that the FBI has replied that they will be prepared and will not let any group or militia take over the base.

It has been confirmed that the American Veterans for Freedom are planning a protest rally on Sunday May 31 at the base.

It has been confirmed that many, many militias from out of state have now committed themselves to aid and fight alongside the Northern California Militia and are just waiting for the "word" from them. It may take a few days for them to travel here depending on which state they are coming from.

What other confirmations do you request?????

Your concerned citizen and Patriot, USCMike1 [End quoting]

IN CASE OF BIOLOGICAL ATTACK
ON THE U.S. CLINTON HAS ORDERED A MASSIVE STOCKPILING OF VACCINES

From the INTERNET, 5/22/98: [quoting]

At the Naval Academy commencement address Clinton announced that he was ordering the production and massive stockpiling of vaccines for possible biological warfare. [End quoting]

Do we really think Clinton is doing this to protect "we the people"? I don't!! I think this is part of the planned depopulation project that he is working hard to accomplish. What a better way than to give you contaminated vaccines when most will be begging for some kind of preventative?? Think I'm wrong? Then look into how the World Health Organization (WHO) murdered tens of thousands of Africans with their vaccines. [End quoting]

Do you really think the elite are stockpiling something for our welfare?? Isn't it more likely this is part of their planned depopulation—like the mass inoculation deaths in Africa??

INSULTING EUROPE

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/25/98: [quoting]

In a speech at Princeton, Austria's state secretary for foreign affairs, Benita Ferrero-Waldner, warned of a potential backlash against free trade in Europe. Said Mrs. Ferrero-Waldner, "I can tell you that the word 'globalization' is becoming an insult in influential circles in Europe among unions, ecology movements and nationalists. [End quoting]

More indications of resistance to the NWO mechanizations!

ROBOT PERFORMS DOCTOR- GUIDED HEART SURGERY

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/22/98: [quoting]

A team of French doctors this month conducted the first successful computer-assisted open heart surgery, with a robot performing the delicate procedure, the lead surgeon announced Thursday.

The May 7 operation at Paris' Broussais Hospital was followed by five other successful heart operations using the same technology, developed by Intuitive Surgical, of Mountain View, Calif., the hospital said.

"It's a revolution, a formidable step forward," said Dr. Alain Carpentier, who performed the surgery with Dr. Didier Loulmet.

Speaking at a news conference, Carpentier said that higher precision is among the benefits of the system, which "lets us perform difficult, even (previously) impossible, gestures".

The system—officially called computer-assisted instrumentation—uses "mini incisions" and is less traumatizing and less painful than traditional techniques, but also more difficult, a hospital statement said.

Several of the six patients, all adults, suffered from heart valve disease. The first patient had a defect involving communication between the heart's two upper chambers, the atria.

Using the system, the surgeon sits at a console several yards from the patient, peering inside the heart via a three-dimensional camera inside the patient and directing a robot that actually performs the surgery.

The surgeon's gestures are transmitted by computer to the robotic tools, which "faithfully reproduce all movements of the surgeon,” Carpentier said.

Dr. Philip Oyer, professor of cardio-thoracic surgery at Stanford University, said the computer-assisted technique is part of a new trend of minimally invasive surgery. [End quoting]

Nice, but are the elite going to let anybody but the rich afford these marvelous techniques?

POSTAL OFFICIALS SENDING TINY
RADIO TRANSMITTERS IN LETTERS

From the INTERNET, 5/19/98: [quoting]

Postal Service officials are testing a simple concept for tracking late letters through the mail.

The devices were tested in Houston, San Francisco and northern Virginia and now are being tried on a broader basis. They allow postal managers to track specific pieces of mail moving through the system.

“Preliminary reports from our field managers indicate that tracking the mail (with radio tags) may be the key to uncovering bottlenecks in our system that could consequently improve service in all classes of mail,” said William Dowling, postal vice president for engineering. [End quoting]

There’s not much doubt that it can find bottlenecks in the postal system, but my guess is that the most important purpose for its use will be for more spying on our mail by better tracking. Don’t forget they have a monopoly on first class mail.

BIOLOGICAL TESTING
LAW REPEALED!

From the INTERNET, 5/6/98: [quoting]

For over twenty years the Department of Defense (DoD) or their contractors were allowed to use the American people as “Guinea pigs” for testing of chemical or biological agents. Since July 30th, 1977, the United States Code annotated Title 50, Chapter 32, Section 1520 remained on the books until drawn into the arena of public discussion on talk radio. Last year, Joyce Riley vonKleist, R.N., presented this as a topic of discussion on several national radio talk shows and was immediately greeted with skepticism and ridicule by many news directors and editors who refused to acknowledge the existence of such a law. The debate raged on for several months and many listeners took the initiative and the time to research this law only to find that it indeed existed! At the suggestion of the AGWVA, thousands of letters and phone calls poured in to public officials’ offices demanding an explanation and their position statement on this law. Due to overwhelming public outcry, section 1520 was quietly repealed by the passing of H. R. 1119, the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1998 and 1999. [End quoting]

Another case proving if we want the politicians to change the laws we can do it—but not by ignoring our power to act!! WAKE UP and let's stop the elite's railroad to Armageddon and HELL!!

ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO TELLS WHAT THE REAL DANGER IS

From the INTERNET, 5/24/98: [quoting]

Ever wonder what our leaders think is truly dangerous to our nation? Janet Reno made it very plain. WHY DOES NO ONE NOTICE?

Attorney General Janet Reno Interview on 60 Minutes, June 26, 1994 “A cultist is one who has a strong belief in the Bible and the Second Coming of Christ; who frequently attends Bible studies; who has a high level of financial giving to a Christian cause; who home schools their children; who has accumulated survival foods and has a strong belief in the Second Amendment; and who distrusts big government.”

“Any of these may qualify [a person as a cultist] but certainly more than one [of these] would cause us to look at this person as a threat, and his family as being in a risk situation that qualified for government interference.”

Now you know. WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

God bless our Constitution and our Nation, Dr. Richard E. Pearl, Sr. [End quoting]

Yes, what are we going to do about it?? The elite broadcast what they are going to do to us and yet most of us are too lazy to get off our rear-ends to prevent their planned tortures and murders of ourselves—let alone our children and parents.

CARBON GOES ELECTRONIC

From POPULAR MECHANICS magazine, June 1998: [quoting]

For the first time, researchers have observed semiconducting behavior in carbon composites.

“This means we can use the structural material itself as the electronics. The whole piece is ‘smart’ and no electrical interconnection is needed,” says Deborah Chung, a professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo who made the discovery.

Unlike conventional silicon semiconductors, which are made from different materials, carbon semiconductors derive their electron-flow regulating properties from the alignment of the carbon fibers themselves.

Possible applications include wafer-thin batteries and computers made without discrete “chips”. [End quoting]

FIBER CARRIES LASER PUNCH

From POPULAR MECHANICS magazine, June 1998: [quoting]

A fiberoptic strand the thickness of the lead in a mechanical pencil has transmitted sufficient laser energy to cut through a 1/2in. stainless steel plate.

The light, created by a 7.4kw chemical oxygen-iodine laser, was transmitted through 900-micron-dia. fiber for a distance of about 6 ft. in an experiment devised by scientists from the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign and STI Optronics, of Seattle.

“If we can easily move high-energy light wherever it is needed in a manufacturing environment, the laser would be an efficient commercial tool for metalcutting and welding,” says Capt. Brian Quillen of Kirtland Air Force Base, in New Mexico, where the test was conducted. [End quoting]

Here’s another coup for the metals industry.

BANKS PLEDGE BILLIONS

From THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, 5/21/98: [quoting]

Merger partners NationsBank and BankAmerica pledged Wednesday to lend $350 billion over the next decade to minorities and low—and moderate—income customers nationwide. The package includes home mortgages and other consumer loans, as well as community development money and loans to small businesses. [End quoting]

This is a good method to rake in all the property of the low income people. Loan them more than they can pay back and, after they miss a payment, foreclose. Sounds to me like just another of the gangster-banksters’ rotten scams.

If you think the banksters are out to help “we the people” just look at the billing charges for every little thing they do—now they’ve talking about charging you for calling them, and to see a teller—and their record profit contiunues to grow.

MARINES IN CHICAGO: CAN YOU TAKE A CITY DOWN?

City fathers host a most unusual tour

From a FAX, 5/21/98: [quoting]

When the Marines say they’ve been “in Chicago”, they’re not kidding: They’ve been under it and over it, too.

About 100 Marines flew into Chicago May 5-7 for a crash course on the city's power grid, communications, transportation, sewer, water and other infrastructure.

Their goal: to try to grasp the challenges of fighting in a large and modern city.

The visit was part of Urban Warrior, and Marine Corps Warfighting Lab's two-year effort to improve the way the Corps fights in urban areas. Participants included Marines from the Warfighting Lab in Quantico, Va.; special Purpose Marine Air-Ground Task Force (Experimental); and 24th Marines, a reserve regiment that acted as a facilitator for the visit.

"We're not trying to take down a whole city," said Major James O'Dwyer, who works at the lab.

"The whole concept is to identify key nodes—centers of gravity—in the city and figure out how to take them down," he said.

To do that, the Marines are developing a new handbook to help commanders tasked with urban operations.

The "Generic Intelligence Requirements Handbook", now for urban operations in draft form, contains a series of questions commanders can check off to make sure they are covering all the bases.

Marines are briefed on the tunnel system beneath Chicago's streets while participating in a crash course on urban fighting. By studying the city's telecommunications, sewer, transportation and other systems, the Marines learned what it would take to shut down all or a portion of a large modern city. [End quoting]

Of course they don't plan to use this here in "the land of the free". Are we awake, yet??

JUST ONE MAN

From the INTERNET, 5/26/98: [quoting]
What can I do, for I'm just one man?
And I know injustice abounds in our land;
And just because I can do only little,
I'll keep down my voice and stay in the middle.
I am just one man, and I have been told,
That government agents attack all the bold;
They infiltrate meetings and join all the groups,
So don't expect me to stand up to their troops.
For I am just one man and liberty fails,
The best of our leaders are rotting in jails;
So who is the one who will show me the way,
Since I am no leader, and it's not my day?
What can I do, for I'm only me?
And I know that no matter what I may see,
I can feel justified here in my woods,
Hiding myself and stashed-away goods.

What can I do, for I am just one ?
And everyone knows that it wasn't MY son,
When they burned down a church and killed 87,
I whispered a prayer and sent it to heaven.
Don't brother me, for I'm just one man,
Making a living the best that I can;
And though I have purchased a lot of gun toys,
It was only so I could be one of the boys.
I am just one man, so what can I do,
When I hear of neighbors killed for their views.
That is the time that I will refuse,
To purchase a paper or turn on the news.
What can I do, for I am alone ?
And they haven't yet gotten to my family's home,
So if I am quiet and hide like a mouse,
Perhaps they will pass me for my neighbor's house.
I am just one man, so what can I say?
I just want to live till I'm wrinkled and gray,
When innocent blood cries up from the ground,
Don't look for me, for I won't be around.
Don't call on me, for I'm just one,
And even though innocents need of my hand,
I'll cover my eyes and plug up my ears,
And drown out conscience with twenty-four bars.
Don't call on me, for I'm just one,
Who just wants to live out my days in the Sun.
So don't tell me stories that hurt me to think,
Instead, we should go to the pub for a drink.
I know that one man cannot save the day,
So give me a break and get out of my way,
And go tell your stories to someone who's brave,
For I find it easy to just be a slave.
Across all the land ten million men cried,
And all of them fed on the very same lies.
And evil has triumphed for nothing was done,
While ten million men said, "I'm only one."

HE MAKES WINDS

His Messengers (Psalm 104:4)

From ANGELS ON EARTH, Nov/Dec 1996, Guideposts, 39 Seminary Hill Rd., Carmel, NY 10512:

My older brother and I had always been close. Our creative interests drew us together. Bob was a talented painter, and I danced. He came to all my recitals and clapped louder than anyone in the audience. When I went to college and landed a position with a small dance company, I missed hearing Bob in the crowd. "Remember, Sis," he used to make a point of saying before each performance, "I love you very much." His encouragement kept me going.

In November 1995 I got a devastating call. Bob was dead, killed in a hunting accident. Why hadn't I ever told him how much I had depended on him? Now he'll never know, I thought despondently.

On the first anniversary of his death, the day before Thanksgiving, I picked out a single red rose to bring to his grave. A small, plain white card came with it, and I wrote: "I miss you so much. I'll always love you."

At the grave I saw that others had been thinking of Bob too: Flowers were everywhere. I laid the rose down, put my card next to it and said a prayer. God knew I would have given anything to hear my brother's encouragement again.

I went back to the cemetery on Christmas Day. I was cold. The wind had picked up, and I was sorry I didn't have a jacket. Debris whipped around my feet as I walked through the grass to Bob's grave. I could see no signs of the flowers so many of us had left at Thanksgiving. Whatever wasn't cleaned up by the groundskeeper must ave blown away, I thought, looking t the windswept grave.

I leaned close to touch Bob's memorial plaque. A small piece of white paper lay near it undisturbed. Was the wind blowing around it? Or holding it in its spot? Curious, I picked it up. Though rain had faded the writing I could still make out the words. But now it was as if they had been sent back to me: I miss you so much. I'll always love you." —by Cynthia Shepard, Cape Coral, Florida [End quoting]

Little incidents such as this are pleasant confirmations that God and His angels are watching over us.
